Vinson Slated To Make Plea For New Tax Plan Today

Ways-Means Gives Chilly Reception To Program Offered By Morgenthau

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson today will seek to save the Administration's 10.5 billion dollar tax program from the dead end into which tax-writing Congressmen appeared ready to steer it yesterday.

Vinson will appear before the House Ways and Means Committee, whose members yesterday accorded a chilly reception to the program presented by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, calling for stiff increases in individual income taxes, boosts in corporation, gift and estate levies, and more and higher excise taxes.

Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, said Vinson was expected to discuss inflation, cited by Morgenthau along with the present level of war costs as a major reason for the proposed tax boosts. Vinson was former chairman of the Ways and Means Taxation Subcommittee.

Call Figures Too High

Doughton, like other members of his committee, protested the tax proposals outlined by Morgenthau and Treasury Counsel Randolph Paul as being larger "in the aggregate than the taxpayers can reasonably bear at this time, in view of the already heavy tax liability."

From the Democrats on the committee came proposals that a general sales tax be substituted for the Treasury plan, and members on both sides suggested that Government economies replace some of the proposed revenue.

In denouncing Morgenthau's plan as over-ambitious, Doughton said it would be carefully considered, but that he did not see "at this time how we can make the full increases requested, either in individual, corporate or excise taxes."

He said that at a time when the committee was seeking to simplify taxes, the Treasury proposals for refundable taxes, or forced savings, "would add further to the complexity of income taxes and income tax forms."

Hits Excise Program

"I think some of the increase recommended on excise taxes are utterly indefensible," said Doughton.

"Any benefit which might arise from the effect of the Treasury's plan in curbing inflation would be more than offset by such unbearable increased burdens, which may well have a tendency to break down the morale of the taxpayer," Doughton argued.

Doughton's statement apparently reflected accurately a general feeling of hostility to the Treasury program shared by most committee members. Capitol leaders expect four to five billion in new taxes to be the top concession that Congress will make.

For the individual the Treasury program offered the blueprint of drastic modification in the present income tax system, with some decreases in the lowest brackets, increases ranging from a fraction of one per cent up to around 16 or 17 per cent over existing tax scales in the $50,000 income level, and dropping off to a 5 or 6 per cent increase in the highest brackets.

Repeal for Victory Tax

These results would be achieved by a thorough reshuffling in the income tax structure. The Victory tax would be repealed. So would the earned income credit. The normal tax would stay at 6 per cent, but the whole scale of surtax rates would be boosted upward. These rates now start at 13 per cent for the first $2000 of taxable income, ranging to 82 per cent at $200,000. They would be 21 per cent for the first $500 of taxable income, ranging to 30 per cent at $3000, 40 per cent at $4000, up to

129 U. S. Cars in Big Garage Cost $85 Month Each to House

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

Garaging 129 Government-owned vehicles at the old Capital Garage, 1312 New York ave. nw., which was leased August 1 by the Federal Works Agency, is costing the Federal government $85 a month for each car, exclusive of pay for personnel, it was learned yesterday.

While there are now but 129 cars using the huge garage for night storage only, officials explained that it was planned to store a total of 386 vehicles there eventually.

At the same time it was shown the building is being leased for a rental of $134,925 a year or more than $11,000 a month.

This would mean that the cost to the Government of housing the 386 cars at night would amount to $28 each a month.

At the same time it was learned that the Capital Garage, which formerly occupied the building but has since moved to 1630 L st. nw., charges $15 a month to garage a car for the night.

The Government agencies maintain a staff of 12 to operate the building, including two mechanics. The FWA is now trying to get more mechanics. The cost of this force is not reflected in the per car garage cost.

In addition to parking Government cars, there are three floors which have been set aside for use in storing records of various agencies. Among these is the Bureau of the Census and the Navy.

Among the agencies now using the garage for parking are the Navy, the Office of Emergency Management, Public Buildings Administration, The Geological Survey and the FWA.

Officials said offers to take care of the additional cars they believed could be accommodated had been made to several agencies, and that some of them were now canceling their arrangements with private parking eoncerns.

The garage is equipped to wash and service cars with gasoline, oil and greasing jobs, as well as repair work. It has the equivalent of ten stories, accessible by ramps.

Due to the nature of the use to which the cars are put, the garage is usually empty during the daylight hours. As the time when the cars will be required for use is practically the same with all agencies, officials of the FWA said they feared that storing more than 386 would create a serious traffic problem on New York ave., when the cars leave in the morning and return at night.

Officials said they had learned that prior to the time the Capital Garage relinquished the building the concern was storing only 200 cars a night and averaging 300 transient cars a day. Officials of the company said the building could park a total of 1250 cars without using the roof.

Sen. Holman Ready to Launch Drive for District Autonomy

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon yesterday declared that he is prepared to introduce a resolution for the organization of a charter commission to give District residents the opportunity to choose their own form of government.

Sharply rebuking Commissioner Guy Mason for his refusal to express an opinion last week before a Senate subcommittee investigating Gallinger Municipal Hospital, Holman said: "The fundamental remedy for existing conditions at Gallinger is to be found in the over-all government of the District.

"The people of the District should have the right of a free people to at least recommend to Congress the kind of government they desire," the Senator asserted.

"If the suggestion meets with reasonable support I am willing to introduce an appropriate resolution in harmony with it."

Electors, he said, would have to be defined in terms of length of residence in Washington so that only bonafide citizens would participate. Such a clause, it was pointed out, would eliminate guests in the city for the duration of the war and other transients.

He declared that the immediate causes of the "unsatisfactory conditions" at Gallinger were:

1. Inadequate facilities, equipment and supplies.

2. Shortage of number and unsatisfactory kind of employes.

3. Lack of discipline throughout the institution which, he said, brings up "the most important element of government, the fixing of authority and responsibility."

"Consideration of item No. 3 takes us into the government of the District, which was exemplified by the remarkable conduct of Commissioner Mason when he was requested to cooperate with the Senate committee in its investigation and refused to do so," Holman said. He added:

"He realized he was not responsible to anyone, other than to the

Canvassers at Rallies Receive Instructions for D. C. War Fund

Government and Business Divisions of the Community War Fund, which have pledged almost three-quarters of the $4,800,000 quota, yesterday held rallies to receive final instructions for the drive, which the President will open nationally tonight in a 10:30 broadcast.

At the conclusion of the presidential appeal for gifts for our soldiers, our Allies and our home front, Station WMAL will broadcast the official opening of the campaign in the District. Coleman Jennings, chairman of the 1944 drive here, will ask Washingtonians to give at least 20 per cent more than they donated last year.

About two thousand Government workers, who will hold section meetings during the week, were told by their chairman, Preston Delano, that "no cause was ever more just" than this year's Community War Fund.

Delano added, "It is simple justice that we behind the lines should give up all we can, and more, to our fighting men who have drawn a harder lot." He also cited the needs of "those unfortunate people who live under the rule of the ruthless" and "that portion of the local citizenry who need a helping hand."

Appealing to Government volunteers to "open the windows to let brotherhood in," Earl Godwin, radio commentator, asserted the Community Fund "covers everything," as he told of the many services which fund dollars will give.

Jennings urged workers to place their gifts on a personal basis, in memory of the fighting men with whom they are closely identified.

He emphasized the theme of this year's fund, "Crown thy good with brotherhood," pleading: "After you have bought war bonds, paid taxes and spent in the higher cost of living—will you crown all three with a gift of brotherhod?"

Rep. Lea Named to Succeed Cox at Helm of FCC Inquiry

Representative Lea (Democrat) of California yesterday was named chairman of the special House committee to investigate the Federal Communications Commission.

Lea was appointed by Speaker Rayburn of Texas to succeed Representative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia, who resigned last week after demands that he be removed from the committee.

In anouncing the appointment of Lea, who is chairman of the House committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Speaker Rayburn said that he had served in Congress with him for 27 years, and he added:

"Mr. Lea is a man of splendid courage, unimpeachable integrity and great ability. He is possessed of a splendid judicial temperament and his fairness cannot be questioned."

Lea said that his first move in the investigation would be to bring himself up to date on what had already been done, and then proceed to complete the inquiry.

"I trust that the investigation will not rest on a plane of personal controversy," said Lea, "but rather on the important question as to whether or not this agency and its personnel hav been and are now properly performing their duties—their public duties—o the country."

Chairman Lea declared that Congress was "entirely within its rights" in investigating the FCC or any other executive agency.

In ordering the FCC investigation, Lea said, the House made it

Marshall Hits Plan to Draft Dads by Age

Statement Declared Death Knell to Taft's Substitute For Wheeler Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, yesterday stepped into the Senate scramble for a fathers' draft substitute to oppose as militarily "unsound" a Senate move to induct younger fathers first.

Marshall's statement virtually sounded the death knell of the so-called Taft substitute, to induct fathers in age groups, beginning with family heads under 25.

With the Wheeler bill to halt father induction clearly doomed and the Taft substitute under fire, leaders set the stage for a series of showdowns today and tomorrow to end fathers' draft "uncertainties" once and for all.

Bailey-Clark Plan

Chosen leadership weapon to kill the Wheeler bill and sidetrack the Taft age-group substitute was the Bailey-Clark amendment restricting deferments of Government nonfathers. Senate Majority Leader Barkley said a vote on the Bailey measure, revised to meet Administration views, may come late today.

Marshall's letter to Chairman Robert R. Reynolds of the Senate Military Committee said the Taft amendment would hinder efficient utilization of military manpower by forcing the Army to rely mainly on men over 30 next year for battle casualty replacements.

Other developments as Senate debate neared a climax:

1. Marshall's letter touched off an attack on the high command by Senators Robert A. Taft (Republican) of Ohio and Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana. Taft termed Marshall's arguments against calling men in age groups "ridiculous non sequitur" and charged they were in conflict with the general's testimony before the military committee.

Barkley Defends Stand

2. Senate Majority Leader Barkley defended the consistency of Marshall's stand on the draft, repeating the general's warning that there are not enough eligible fathers under 30 to meet military needs beyond February 1 of next year, and urging induction of a "cross section" of age groups to meet diverse military needs.

3. Senate Majority Whip Lister Hill warned the Senate not to "gamble with the lives of American boys" by interfering with induction schedules. Hill told the Senate that while the Army may reach peak strength of 7,700,000

Allied Headqquarters, Algiers, Oct. 4.—The Allied offensive rolled forward along the entire Italian Front today, with landings from the Adriatic Sea 17 miles behind the enemy's lines enabling the British Eighth Army to make a spectacular gain in the face of stiffening German resistance.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's amphibious operation—the same type of "leap-frogging" advance that proved highly successful in earlier campaigns in Africa, Sicily and Calabria—trapped an undisclosed number of Nazi troops and clinched positions at Termoli, almost midway between the Italian heel and the mouth of the River Po in northern Italy. Desperate German counterattacks failed to drive the British veterans back into the sea.

Nazis Report Clash

Fighting through a steady rain, American troops of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army pushed forward from Benevento, 32 miles northeast of Naples, to force an important crossing over the Calore River and tonight were in position to outflank any defense line the Nazis might attempt to establish along the Volturno River, of which the Calore is a tributary.

British armored patrols thrusting northward from Naples engaged in brisk clashes with the retreating enemy, but there yet was nothing to indicate the Germans intend to fight anything more than a rear-guard action in that area.

(The Berlin radio reported a sharp clash at Giugliano, only five miles north of Naples, and said an Allied vanguard was repulsed after hard fighting. It said German forces were taking up new positions between Naples and Rome, but gave no hint of the location of the new line).

Rain helped to slow the assault above Naples, but the weather improved sufficiently for American bombers to resume their blasting of Nazi communications.

The air attack was directed primarily against bridges and highways around Capua, Isernia and Mignano, between Naples and Rome where the Nazis have concentrated their transport.

American Mitchells destroyed a high bridge northeast of Isernia, wrecked an important road intersection and knocked down four enemy craft. Two waves of marauders also knocked out the Capua road bridge across the Volturno after long columns of enemy troops

Jap Diary Describes Beheading of Yank

The Japanese beheaded a captured American airman last March on New Guinea, General MacArthur's headquarters disclosed yesterday in making public a diary captured from a Japanese soldier giving details of the execution.

The American, whose name was not given, was described as a 23-year-old captain or flight commander in the air transport division, with headquarters at Port Moresby. He was in a Douglas plane shot down by antiaircraft March 18, presumably at Salamaua, New Guinea.

He was taken in a truck to a water-filled bomb crater.

There a Japanese officer, acting under orders, beheaded the flier according to the Samurai code, with a sword.

EDITOR'S NOTE—The details of the execution and the treatment of the flier's body as described in the diary are published on Page 3 of this edition, for those who care to read them. The essentials of the savage crime are set forth in the summary above.

4000 Germans Fall Fighting To Hold Gomel

Bad Weather and Stiff Resistance Slow Red Drive

By the Associated Press

London, Tuesday, Oct. 5.—Russian airmen, apparently hammering the last German remnants fleeing from the Caucasus to the Crimea, sank six more barges carrying troops and supplies yesterday, while the Red army forced another river near Gomel and killed nearly 4000 Germans amid bitter tank battles in White Russia, Moscow announced early today.

The Soviet Black Sea airmen also destroyed more than 100 trucks and dispersed a German battalion. But there was as yet no official Moscow report on what Berlin has hinted—that the liberation of the Caucasus was in its final stage.

Red Army Is Slowed

In White Russia and along the Dnieper River line of the Ukraine, bad weather and fierce German resistance definitely had slowed the Red army for the first time since it launched its successful summer offensive to hurl back the Germans 200 miles to the Dnieper, the Moscow communique indicated.

The Red army was massing men and material for the next big phase—a strike across the Dnieper in the Ukraine—while Soviet forces still battered at the approaches to Gomel, Mogilev and Vitebsk in White Russia on the north.

3000 Germans Wiped Out

A group of Soviet automatic riflemen crossed a river near Gomel, probably the Sozh northeast of the city, routed the German defenders, and paved the way for the crossing of the main Russian forces, the bulletin said.

In another sector of the Gomel front, the Russians said one of their units beat down seven enemy

Nazis Wrest Coo Positions From British

Yugoslav Patriots Battle Germans Along 350-Mile Front

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 4.—Striking in strength by sea and air, German forces have wrested several strongpoints from the British on the island of Coo, in the Italian Dodecanese, the Allies acknowledged today, but in Yugoslavia determined patriot armies heavily engaged the Nazis on a long, irregular front.

The counter-assault upon Coo, 23 miles long and the second largest island of the Dodecanese, lying near Turkey, was a minor but measurable setback in the Allied campaign in the Aegean, and the Middle East Command announced that "the fighting continues."

A strong air armada punished German invasion boats all day Sunday, when the landings began, and big bombers winged out to bomb the airfields at Calato, on Rhodes, and Heraklion, in Crete, to weaken Nazi air support of their island drive.

British Surprised, Nazis Say

Berlin asserted all military installations had been seized on Coo, and that the British garrison was taken by surprise. Coo was recovered September 22 by the British, along with Lero, in the Dodecanese, and the Greek island of Samos, to the north.

The Yugoslavs, eager to speed the day of liberation, battled the Nazis on a front from northeastern Italy in the frontier region 350 miles down the coast of Yugoslavia, broadening their lodgement in the lower section of their homeland and tearing up German port and rail communications in the bottleneck where the Italian peninsula meets the Balkans.

Wiping Out Nazi Garrisons

They struck with rising power at a time when the German flank in the Balkans was being increasingly menaced by the British Eighth Army on the Adriatic shores of Italy.

A Free Yugoslav communique gave these details of the struggle pinning down a large number of Nazi divisions:

The Tara River city of Kolasin in southern Yugoslavia 75 miles inland from the port of Dubrovnik was captured in bitter fighting.

All isolated German garrisons in Lika Province are encircled and

Blows That Count

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), Oct. 5.—American fighters and bombers blasted 75 Nazi planes from the sky in raids on Frankfurt and other German targets yesterday and the Royal Air Force kept the pressure on early today by sending bombers roaring across the Channel "in strength."

It was the fourth successive night thrust by RAF bombers against the German-dominated Continent. Residents of one English southeast coast town reported hearing an unbroken roar of outbound planes for more than an hour.

A few German air raiders dropped high explosive bombs in one district in East Anglia.

In addition to the Frankfurt attack, United States fliers also hit other targets in western Germany and conducted operations over the North Sea.

15 Heavy Bombers Lost

A joint communique issued by U. S. Army headquarters and the British Air Ministry said the operations were carried out with the loss of 15 heavy bombers.

The Flying Fortresses that hammered Frankfurt arrived over that city only a few hours after RAF night raiders gutted Kassel with 1680 tons of explosives hurled down at the rate of 56 tons per minute.

The Fortresses were guarded by long-range, Thunderbolt fighter planes, which accounted for 19 of the total of enemy craft destroyed. The rest were blasted out of the sky by the Fortresses and the Liberators which participated in the North Sea sweep.

In addition to the German targets, the Fortresses also blasted the enemy-held airfield at St. Dizier, France.

Yanks Have Strong Opposition

United States Thunderbolts (P-47s) supported the Fortresses in their penetration into enemy territory and withdrawal support was provided by squadrons of Spitfires. The day's operations were described as among the biggest yet carried out by the American Eighth Air Force.

In the attack on Kassel, 100 miles east of the Ruhr, the RAF dropped a concentration of bombs equal to the best record made against Hamburg on July 27 and against Berlin on September 3.

Frankfurt is only 100 miles to the south. Strong opposition was reported on the American raids, but there were indications that the multiple blows into Germany had rattled the enemy defenses.

The Kassel attack was accompanied by a Mosquito raid on Hanover, 80 miles to the north. The fliers in the Kassel raid saw antiaircraft and searchlight barrages

U. S. to Remain Maritime Power, British Are Told

Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery of the Maritime Commission, said the United States will remain a maritime power after the war, "with or without cooperation" of the British. He said British-American talks are under way concerning postwar distribution of this country's excess shipping facilities. (Details on Page 5.)

Aircraft production in America during September, it was revealed meanwhile, was just "about the same" as in August, when 7612 planes were made. Important shifts in the program were said to have prevented the total from climbing to a hoped-for 8000-a-month level. (Details on Page 5.)

Postwar Unity With America Pledged by New Russian Envoy

Andrei A. Gromyko, newly appointed Soviet Ambassador, told President Roosevelt yesterday that the Soviet Union has full confidence that the United States and Russia will be able to continue and strengthen their friendly relations after the war.

Gromyko, in remarks made upon presentation of his credentials to Mr. Roosevelt, said the Russian government has the "unswerving desire and aspiration" to maintain and develop "friendly relations and closest collaboration" with this country.

"The friendship of the peoples of our countries is not accidental. It is the expression of the basic interests of our peoples and our nations," Gromyko said.

The Allied military campaigns in Italy and North Africa "have created a favorable military political situation for inflicting decisive blows upon the hated enemy," Gromyko told the President.

The Ambassador praised "remarkable successes of Anglo-American arms in North Africa and Sicily."

Both Gromyko and Mr. Roosevelt, in his reply to the Ambassador's remarks, stated that the war is clearly turning in favor of the United Nations.

Gromyko expressed gratitude to the United States for "not only moral but substantial material support in the form of airplanes, tanks, guns and other military material, and also foodstuffs," which the Soviet Union has received during her struggle with the Nazi armies.

"The Soviet people highly values this support," Gromyko said, and expressed belief "the present joint struggle against our common foe—Hitlerite Germany and her allies in Europe—will bring about close collaboration of our countries in the postwar period, in the interest of general peace and security."

Mr. Roosevelt expressed his happiness at receiving Gromyko's credentials and assured him of the "full cooperation and support of the Government of the United States" in his task of further developing friendly relations between the United States and Russia.

Civilian Plane Spotter Service Discontinued as Manpower Aid

John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Active operation of the Nation's civilian volunteer aircraft warning service was ordered discontinued last night because of the manpower shortage and the lessened risk of air raids on continental United States.

Some 600,000 spotters and other part-time volunteers were released for other civilian defense work as the country's 7500 civilian observation posts and 43 aircraft warning filter centers abandoned 24-hour operations and went on a stand-by basis.

Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Army Air Force commander, declared in a letter to the volunteers of the warning service that the move was "not based upon any belief that the war's end is yet in sight." On the contrary, he said, "many months of bitter fighting" lie ahead.

"We have made the transition, however, to the offensive," Arnold stated. "We are pressing the attack home upon our enemies, and we must at once bring to bear every ounce of offensive power of which this Nation is capable.

"The War Department is assuming the calculated risk that the small-scale air attack of which the enemy is now strategically capable may meet with some measure of success. This course is justified because manpower and facilities are thereby released that will con-

Summary of Morgenthau's Recommendations Concerning New Tax Program

A condensed text of Treasury Secretary Morgenthau's statement to the House Ways and Means Committee calling for increased revenues to meet war costs follows:

Because of the huge cost of the war, it is necessary for us to ask for a great deal of money. We need it, and the time to get it is now, when the national income is the highest it has ever been.

The budget for the fiscal year 1944 calls for 106 billions in expenditures. And while it may be possible, and I hope it is, to curtail some governmental expenditures, even that will not lessen our need for getting at this time all that the American people can possibly give us in additional taxes.

The additional taxes for which we are going to ask will make it necessary for people to take in their belts—but the cold hard facts of fiscal necessity demand it. We know by now that our willingness to spend the necessary funds, no matter how large, has had and will continue to have a definite effect on the lives of our men in battle. The superior fighting equipment which we have produced and bought has been expensive, but it will shorten the war and will save the lives of thousands of American fighting men.

Helps Shorten War

The money that is expended to help our Allies keep the enemy engaged on dozens of fronts all over the world also saves untold lives and helps shorten the war. . . .

We must raise a great deal of additional money for financing the war and combating inflation, and yet in doing it we cannot overlook the fact that there is a point beyound which some people of moderate means cannot pay higher taxes of any sort and still keep a family going. There is a point beyond which they cannot meet the tax bills and still maintain a standard of living which will permit them to continue to help in the effective prosecution of the war.

I am telling you this to emphasize the fact that the Treasury Department has not arbitrarily set down a figure as the amount to be raised, without regard to the problems which exist, and which must be met. We have, over the past several months, asked the help of every executive department of Government having any relationship to taxes, including the Army and Navy. And I think we have examined every conceivable plan to raise additional taxes.

Four Considerations

We have measured these plans against:

First, the ability of the plan to raise money, and its effect on the inflation problem.

Second, the degree to which it might interfere with war production.

Third, the degree of hardship the plan places upon people with fixed incomes and with fixed obligations; and upon people with indaquate incomes; and

Fourth, its practicability and cost from the standpoint of its administration. No plan is good if it is impractical for the Government to handle, or if it unduly tries the patience of the taxpayer who is already burdened with too much and too complicated paper work.

One of our chief considerations in developing a tax program has been the drawing off of what is called "excess spending money." It has been estimated that income payments to individuals will amount to 152 billion dollars in the fiscal year of 1944. The amount of goods and services available can absorb only about 89 billion of this 152 billion, leaving 63 billion. Personal taxes will reduce this figure by 21 billion at the present rate, leaving a total of about 42 billion dollars. Of this 42 billion dollars we expect to draw off a substantial amount in the sale of war bonds to individuals. During the past 12 months—that is to say, through the three drives which we have had, and the regular bond sales which go on month after month—we will have absorbed nearly 17 billion dollars of this "excess spending money" from individuals.

Danger of Inflation

There are, of course, other forms of noninflationary savings, such as life insurance, which also must be substracted from the 42 billion potentially dangerous dollars.

But even taking into consideration these savings along with war bonds, a substantial amount of excess income will still be left. There will be available spending money far in excess of the limited supply of goods available, and with this excess the danger of inflation mounts . . .

In the three years 1940, 1941, 1942, I recommended to Congress tax increases totaling approximately 18 billion dollars, and I am glad to say that Congress enacted most of these increases.

These tax increases and the money that we have realized through the sale of bonds have been substantially helpful, in connection with other governmental actions and restrictions, in controlling inflation to the extent to which it has thus far been controlled.

From a statistical standpoint, we know where the bulk of the new money lies, and where, therefore, lies, also the greatest danger of inflationary pressure.

$5000-a-Year Group

Today, four-fifths of all the income of the Nation is going to people earning less than $5000 a year. And except for the people earning no more than a bare subsistence wage, this group presents the greatest potential danger from the inflationary standpoint. The weight of the inflationary money in the hands of this group can cause undue price rises, and can completely upset our entire economic system, unless absorbed in sufficient quantity.

Having this in mind, as well as the need for additional funds to finance this most expensive war, the Treasury set a goal earlier this year of 12 billion dollars as the amount of additional revenue which should be raised by new taxation.

Since this goal was set we have gone outside the Treasury offices, outside of Washington. We knew that 12 million dollars, when translated into individual cases, was a great deal of money, and as we progressed in our investigation, we became more and more aware of the problems we would have in levying so large an additional tax on anything like an equitable basis.

While it is perfectly obvious that the economic condition of the country indicates a great deal of room for additional taxation, income is not distributed in such a way that it can equitably be drawn off in huge quantities straight across any given income level.

Asks 10½ Billions

We found this out very differently when we made actual observations in the field. When we talked to actual people—people who pay rent, feed their families and meet the extra bills which wartime living saddles upon them, we found that some had ability to pay much heavier taxes—but that others earning the same amount of money could not bear as heavy a burden. . . .

The amount of money we can take by tax legislation cannot possibly absorb enough of our dangerous dollars, but we must ask the people, so that they may protect themselves from the injustice of inflationary price rises, to do all they possibly can. And while I think we should not burden the American taxpayers at this time with additional taxes in so great an amount as 12 billion dollars, I do believe that they can pay, and will, an additional total of 10.5 billions.

At first glance, it may seem that a billion and a half less than our original figure is not a substantial reduction; but all of the reduction is in the individual income tax and it amounts to a great deal in terms of a reduced burden on any given individual or family.

The proposed schedule calls for 6.5 billions in additional individual income taxes.

We realize that these additional taxes, even in the reduced amount of 6.5 billions, will impose a heavy burden on some taxpayers. You may therefore wish to consider some device for lessening the ultimate impact of the increased tax on the lower income groups.

Postwar Refund

One such device which we have considered, and which I pass along to you for your consideration, is provision for a postwar refund of a part of the tax.

Such a refund should benefit the lower income groups and might be in the range of between 2 and 3.5 billions of the 6.5 billion tax. If such a device should be used, it is suggested that the taxpayer be permitted to purchase with his refund credit a fully paid-up life insurance policy. There should also be a special provision permitting the immediate use for tax payment of any postwar credit in cases where the taxpayer's income has not increased substantially.

As a result of our investigations among average Americans, there is an important general recommendation that I want to make. It is vitally important that every possible step be taken to reduce the complications in our tax laws which make it necessary for the taxpayer to fill out complex and difficult tax forms . . .

Toward Simplification

The Victory tax confuses the taxpayers and makes impossible any real simplification of tax forms . . .

I, therefore, recommend the repeal of the Victory tax as the first and most important single step toward tax simplifications . . .

While it does not seem desirable simply to exempt wholly from taxation all those now liable for Victory tax, but not within present income tax brackets, equity will be promoted by repealing the Victory tax and lowering present income tax exemptions. By lowering them to $1100 for married persons, and $300 for dependents, we would retain with about the same tax burden, those taxpayers now liable only for Victory tax, who are best able to bear the burden of some income tax. At the same time we would relieve nine million hard-pressed families from tax on their incomes . . .

In the interest of simplification, there is another recommendation I want to make again, as I did last year. I urge the repeal of the earned income credit.

The elimination of the earned income credit would make possible the achievement of a further important simplification through the consolidation of the normal tax and the surtax into one tax schedule. . .

Specific Suggestions

A desirable change which would further simplify filing and collection procedure would be the withholding of taxes from wages and salaries at graduated rates. Graduated withholding could keep millions more of our taxpayers on a strictly current paid-up basis by covering the full liability in all brackets instead of just the first bracket, as at present. This would materially reduce the number of persons required to file troublesome declarations of estimated tax. Recent discussions with employers indicate that they believe withholding at graduated rates to be desirable and entirely feasible.

Let me tell you now about our specific suggestions for the tax program.

I am suggesting a program to increase Federal revenue collections of approximately 10.5 billion dollars for a full year of operation.

I recommend that those taxes be raised through an increase in estate and gift taxes, corporation taxes, selected excise taxes, and individual income taxes.

Estate and Gift Taxes

Estate taxes have been a part of our Federal tax structure since 1916, but the total contribution has been unduly small. In this period ahead when great additional revenue is necessary, estate taxpayers should contribute as heavily as possible to the cost of the war along with other groups of taxpayers. I am suggesting that the exemption for estate taxes be reduced from $60,000 to $40,000; that estate and gift tax rates be increased throughout the scale. By so doing, we can raise an additional 400 million dollars on a full year's basis.

Corporation Taxes

It is recommended that corporation taxes be increased. Despite heavy increases in taxes, net corporation income after taxes has risen greatly since 1939. After paying dividends, corporations will have added to their capital out of earnings an estimated 11 billion dollars during the three years of 1941, 1942 and 1943. We therefore recommend that corporation taxes in general be raised, but that small corporations should be given special favorable treatment. Our schedule for increasing corporation taxes has been worked out along this line and will raise an additional 1.1 billion dollars.

Excise Taxes

It is the belief of the Treasury Department that an increase in excise tax rates has much to commend it as a means of raising additional money during a war period. Little or no increase in administrative machinery is required. Items can be selected which need to be conserved for war purposes and additional taxes can be placed upon such items of expenditure as liquor and tobacco. The tax rates that we are suggesting have been fitted to the wartime conditions of supply and demand for each item separately. Under the schedule which we will present to you in detail, we can raise an additional 2.5 billion dollars through increases in present excise tax rates, and through two new excises.

The tax increases just suggested—the added estate and gift taxes of 400 million dollars, the new corporation taxes of 1.1 billion dollars, and the increased excises of 2.5 billions, add up to a total of four billion dollars.

I am suggesting increases in individual income taxes to yield 6.5 billion dollars. In planning a schedule to raise this 6.5 billions in additional income taxes, we have merged the Victory tax into the income tax. As I have indicated, the exemptions suggested are $500 for single persons, $1100 for married persons, and $300 for each dependent.

The total amount of victory tax paid by the nine million people who will thus be relieved of paying any Federal income tax is 300 million dollars, all of which has been redistributed and absorbed in our proposed schedule.

How Income Plan Works

I should like to take a moment now to tell you exactly how this proposed income tax schedule will work in actual practice.

Take, for example, a married person with two deependents. Under the present law, the income tax exemption would amount to $1900, and the victory tax exemption would usually amount to $624. Under the proposal there would be one exemption amounting to $1700.

Such a person having a net income of $1000 a year will pay a gross tax under the present law of $25, of which $11 is his refundable victory tax credit. Under the new proposal, he will not be required to pay any tax at all.

If such a person is earning $3000 a year, he is now paying a gross tax of $327, of which $60 is his victory tax credit. Under the new proposal he would pay $384, or $57 more than his present gross tax.

A married person with two dependents earning $8000 a year is now paying a total of $1735, of which $182 is his victory tax credit. Under the present proposal he would pay $2523, of $788 more than his present gross tax.

At $25,000 per year, a married person with two dependents is now paying $10,171, of which $597 is his victory tax credit. Under the new proposal he would pay $13,750, or $3579 more than his present gross tax.

It is my belief that the suggestions that I have just made constitute a program as equitable as

See SUMMARY, Page 4, Col. 1.

Table for Proposed Taxes

The following tables compare present income tax payments with those called for under the Treasury's proposed rates. The estimates are based on the plan to limit postwar refunds to $250. They also assume that Congress will let the Social Security rates take their automatic jump to 2 per cent of payrolls for employer and employe, in place of the present 1 per cent rate, next January 1.

The "would pay" columns show the estimated upshot of the tax burden, with the postwar credit removed from the total to make the net income tax.

Fall of Bastia Ends Corsica's Conquest

War Sidelights

Nazis Kill Prisoners, Reds Told

London, Oct. 4 (AP).—The Red Army's chief surgeon, Nikolai Burdenko, told the Russian people by radio tonight that the Germans were exterminating war prisoners systematically by "murdering them outright and by causing their death by inhuman forced labor."

Declaring the mortality rate in the war prison camps had reached 20 to 30 per cent, Burdenko charged the prisoners were not given sufficient food or medical care. He said they were kept half-naked in unheated buildings and that "each morning the Germans pulled out the dead bodies and all the survivors were driven out to work" without being given water for washing or drinking.

"I believe that depriving people of food, confining them in unheated buildings, robbing them of their clothing in spite of cold weather and leaving the wounded and sick without medical aid should be treated on a par with ordinary murder and that the German criminals guilty of these crimes should be tried for murder," he declared.

Canada Has Dock Strike

Ottawa, Oct. 4 (AP). — The Canadian Labor Department acted today to use soldiers, sailors and airmen to move war goods and perishable products at Halifax docks where freight handlers stopped work Saturday.

The step was taken when the department was informed that the freight handlers had voted this morning against returning to work. They walked out when it was reported the National War Labor Board had granted them a wage increase of four cents an hour.

2 M. P.'s Hurt in Fracas

London, Oct. 4 (AP).—As a result of a "shooting fracas with United States Army Military Policemen" in Cornwall September 26, 21 American soldiers are being held pending an investigation by the Army provost marshal, the European theater of operations headquarters announced today.

"Two wounded military policemen are still under treatment in a U.S. Army hospital," the announcement added.

Moroccans Take City; U. S. Rangers Mop Up Nazis

By the Associated Press

Algiers, Oct. 4.—Allied forces fashioned another spearhead at Adolf Hitler today with the fall of Bastia in the northeastern corner of Corsica, virtually completing conquest of the island.

Moroccan mountain warriors—the Goumiers—entered the city, the chief commercial city of the Napoleonic isle, at 10 a. m., the French announced, following a devastating artillery bombardment of munitions stores and the escape boats of the Germans.

While this shellfire from the hills was splintering boats and setting fires, the pig-tailed Moroccans employed their sharpshooting skill to chase the Germans out of Furian, three miles southwest of the port, then purused the enemy to the beaches.

U. S. Rangers Mop Up

Only a few isolated remnants of the Germans remained scattered along the beaches and they were being mopped up quickly by American Rangers and French detachments equipped from United States stores.

The French communique said the whole western coast and northern part of Cap Copse, the northern tip of the island, had been cleared as far as Luri, and that Borgo and its airfields 10 miles southwest of Bastia, Vescovato and Casamozza, farther south, had been occupied.

Freeing of the Corsicans from bondage was completed in less than a month after the patriots, supplied secretly by submarine and parachute, attacked the Germans on September 8 when it was learned that Italy had capitulated. The native guerillas had been reinforced by American Rangers and shock battalions rushed in by submarine and fast destroyers.

Most of the 80,000 Italian troops on the island gave up their arms when fighting broke out between them and the Germans. But some joined in the battle against the Germans. One battalion of Italian parachute trops went over to the German side after killing their commander.

Gen. Henry Maptin of the French army commanded the Allied operations in its later phases, in which the Corsican patriots were reported to have killed hundreds of Germans and captured many.

An Allied officer just returned from the island said the Germans got most of their troops out, but suffered about 3000 casualties.

Historic Island

Two-thirds the size of Connecticut, Corsica is 112 miles long and 52 miles wide and is famed as the birthplace of Napoleon. A plaque at Calvi claims the town is the birthplace of Columbus, and it was here that Lord Nelson lost his right eye. The population is about 325,000.

All the 800 miles of Nazi-held coastline from the French-Spanish border to the Volturno River in Italy is within easy range of bombers which can make a round-trip to any point of the semicircle in three hours. Nice, Genoa, Leghorn and La Spezia can be reached in one-hour hops.

This is the chief strategic value of the island, although its airfields are not believed suited to large-scale bomber operations at present. There are naval stations however, at Ajaccio, the capital, on the west coast; Bonifacio on the south coast, and l'Ile Rousse in the north.

The island has been French since 1768, the year before Napoleon's birth.

Day's Raiding Bags 75 German Planes

Curtains of Smoke 30 Miles Away

The raids today were the first by Americans on both Frankfurt—hit many times by the RAF—and St. Dizier which is 130 miles northeast of Bordeaux and 350 miles south of the English Channel. The St. Dizier attack was one of the Fortresses' deepest penetrations into France.

The North Sea operation was the first Liberator raid in this theater since early last month, when Liberators participated in the Allies' eight-day cross-Channel bombing of a convoy along the Dutch Coast and targets in northern France. Since then Eighth Air Force Liberators have raided Wiener Neustadt, in Austria, as well as Corsica and other Mediterranean targets, with the Northwest African Air Force.

Pilots said that eight hours after the 1500 long tons had been cascaded on Kassel, fires were burning so furiously that curtains of smoke were encountered 30 miles northeast of the city.

Sweeping in and out of Germany on an 800-mile round trip the Fortresses made their first precision attack of the war on Frankfurt, whose big rubber, automobile, chemical and rail facilities give it high priority on Allied lists of German targets marked for obliteration.

No Thunderbolts Lost

The escorting Thunderbolts, equipped with extra gasoline tanks for the long haul, did not suffer a single loss.

The RAF loss at Kassel and subsidiary Mosquito bomber thrusts at Hanover and the Rhineland, and the laying of mines in enemy waters, was 24 planes.

Offensive Enters Fourth Day

Kassel was one of the places flooded when the RAF daringly ripped holes in the Mohne Dam last May.

The Fortress blow at Frankfurt, 90 miles southwest of Kassel, sent the latest Allied aerial offensive from Britain spinning into its fourth day, while the new two-way campaign against Germany from Britain and Africa has resulted in the blasting of 17 major enemy targets in a fortnight.

The Allied raiders probably have been averaging easily 25 German fighter victims daily in recent operations. This may well be as much as 50 per cent of the Nazis' current production.

Kassel, 100 miles east of the much-battered Ruhr, is the site of one of the Nazis' few undisrupted fighter plane plants such as the Americans have been attacking in the recent raids in the Vienna, Regensburg and Paris areas. The Henschel Locomotive Auto Works also are there.

Jap Diary Describes Beheading of Yank

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific, Tuesday, Oct. 5.—The Japanese beheading of a captured American airman was disclosed in all its stark details today as General MacArthur's headquarters made public a diary captured from a Japanese soldier at Salamaua, New Guinea.

The execution, carried out according to the "Samurai" code of the Japanese, occurred last March.

Verbatim translations of extracts of the diary, dated March 29, said:

"We all assembled at headquarters where one of the crew of a Douglas shot down by antiaircraft March 18 was brought under guard.

"Tai Commander (Sub-Lieutenant First Class) Komai told us it had been decided to execute him and he was a be according a Samurai's death.

"We were assembled to witness the execution. The prisoner was given a drink of water outside the guard house. The chief surgeon, Lieutenant Komai and a platoon commander bearing a sword came from the officers' mess.

"The time has come. The prisoner of war totters forward with his arms tied. His hair is cut close.

Seems to Suspect What's Afoot

"I feel he suspects what is afoot, but he is more composed than I thought he would be. Without more ado he is put on a truck and taken to the place of execution.

"The prisoner sits beside the chief surgeon and about 10 guards accompany him. The noise of the engine echoes along the road in the hush of twilight. The sun has set and columns of clouds rise before us.

"I glance at the prisoner and he seems prepared. He gazes at the grass, now at the mountains and sea.

"At the execution ground Lieutenant Komai faces the prisoner and said: 'You are to die. I am going to kill you with this Japanese sword according to the Samurai code.'"

"The commander's face is stern. Now the time has come. The prisoner is made to sit on the edge of a water-filled bomb crater. The precaution is taken to surround him with guards.

"When I put myself in his place the hate engendered by this daily bombing yields to ordinary human feelings.

"The Tai commander draws his favorite sword, the famous 'Osamune.' The sight of the glittering blade sends cold shivers down the spine. First he touches prisoner's neck lightly with sword.

Prisoner Closes His Eyes . . . It's All Over

"Then he raises it overhead. His arm muscles bulge. Prisoner closes his eyes for a second and at once the sword sweeps down.

"Swish—it sounds at first like noise of cutting, but is actually made by blood spurting from arteries. The body falls forward. Everybody steps forward as head rolls on the ground.

"The dark blood gushed from trunk. All is over. There lies the head like a white doll.

"I realize that the emotions I felt just now was not personal pity but manifestation of magnanimity that becomes a chivalrous Samurai.

"A superior seaman from the medical unit received the sword from the surgeon. He rolls the body on back.

"'Here's something for the other day—take that,' he says, and with one sweep lays open the abdomen.

"'These thick-headed, white bastards are thick-bellied too,' he remarks. There's not a drop of blood left in man's body. The seaman gives him a kick then buries it.

"The wind blows mournfully and the scene prints itself on my mind. Darkness descents.

"In front of headquarters we got off truck. If ever I get back alive this will make good story to tell. That's why I write it down.

"The prisoner killed today was airforce 'Tai' (captain or flight lieutenant) from Moresby. He young man aged 23, an instructor in Army Transport Command at Moresby."

That ended the entry in the diary. But at the end of the press release, appearing as though headquarters wanted to remember for future reference, was the footnote that said the officer who committed the atrocity was Sublieutenant First Class Komai and the next senior officer responsible was Lieutenant Commander Tsukioka.

The execution described above was the first reported since President Roosevelt announced in April that Japan had executed several U. S. fliers captured after the raid on Tokyo and other Japanese cities April 18, 1942.

The Japanese radio in telling of the executions went on to say that other airmen taken prisoner after raids on Japanese territory would be executed. Killing of captive soldiers is contrary to intenational law as proclaimed under the Geneva convention, to which Japan is a party.

Danes Blast Nazi Barracks, Power Plants, Ships, Factories

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, Oct. 4.—Danish patriots blasted German troop barracks, two power stations and two war material factories in a reintensified sabotage campaign today which provided a militant answer to Germany's attempted purge of the 10,000 Jews in Denmark.

The free Danish press service here said one of the heaviest bombs ever used by saboteurs wrecked the important power station at Broendersley in the Jutland area. Another station at Nibe was damaged and explosions wrecked portions of a troop barracks at Loekken, on the Skaggerak coast of Jutland, where large contingents of Nazi troops are assigned to guard against invasion.

Other damage was caused by saboteurs to a factory at Hilleroed, producing wheels and tires for German armored vehicles, and to a machine factory manufacturing war materials near Copenhagen.

While the Germans blamed the Jews for the sabotage and gave that as one reason for the purge, Danish refugees said the roundup of the Jews, instead of halting moves to hamper the Nazi war effort, would add new impetus to the Danish opposition.

Danish soldiers released after their militant uprising against the Nazis August 29 have refused to pledge themselves not to aid opposition groups. The Germans arranged the release as a propaganda move to counteract the Jewish action.

The German Gestapo, meanwhile, relentlessly continued a purge of Denmark's Jews, extending a house-to-house search all along the Danish coast from Copenhagen north to Helsingoer, from which the hunted people might escape across the narrow sound to Sweden.

Refugees continued to arrive in this country. Bodies of terror-stricken Jews who had plunged into the icy waters to swim across the 3-mile strait between Denmark and Sweden were being washed ashore. The bodies of two Jewish youths were found today on the Swedish coast.

Copenhagen dispatches said the Nazi roundup of Jews was for the purpose of shipping them to Polish or Baltic labor camps.

A Swedish radio broadcast said two large German vessels which were being prepared to transport the Jews to Germany had been sabotaged in Copenhagen harbor last night as non-Jewish Danes joined in efforts to shield the fugitives.

The Danes were helping the Jews to escape the Gestapo in every manner possible. In Hellerup, fighting broke out between the Danes and German police officers.

Penicillin to Erase Need for Serums, Clinical Unit Told

Kansas City, Oct. 4 (AP).—Dr. Harrison F. Flippin, Philadelphia, told the Southwest Clinical Society today that when penicillin, new drug substance made from mold, becomes available in quantities it would do away with the need for serums for pneumonia, meningitis and septicemia.

Dr. M. A. Blankenhorn of Cincinnati, discussing vitamin pills, emphasized that "you can't make a superman out of an ordinary man with all the vitamins in the world—but you can help a person who's sick for lack of certain vitamins."

The American Medical Society, he said, "didn't disparage the importance of vitamins for health, but pointed out that generally speaking it is better to cure a vitamin deficiency by reforming your diet rather than by taking vitamin pills."

Count Calvi Arrested

Bern, Switzerland, Oct. 4 (AP).—A Rome dispatch to the Tribune de Geneve said today the Germans had arrested Count Calvi di Bergolo, military commander of Rome, and husband of Italian Princess Yolanda.

The dispatch did not make clear why the Germans had arrested King Vittorio Emanuele's son-in-law. Yolanda was reported to have arrived in Switzerland on September 9.

Senator Tydings Will Be Speaker At SAE Ceremonies

Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland, will be the principal speaker at installation ceremonies of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity at the University of Maryland in College Park, Md., October 23 and 24, it was announced yesterday by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university.

At the annual convention of the fraternity in August, it was voted that a chapter of the fraternity was to be installed at Maryland. Lauren Foreman and Al Schoth of the SAE chapter at Evanston, John Mosely of the University of Tennessee, and Paul Turner of the University of Illinois will perform the installation ceremonies.

Prominent alumnus of the university who will become members of the fraternity include Senator Tydings, Harry D. Watts, president of the James Stewart Construction Company; Edmund C. Mayo, president of the Gorham Company, and Theodore C. McKeldin, mayor of Baltimore.

Payroll Routine Shortened

—to s-t-r-e-t-c-h accounting time

TIME, so vital to victory, is fortunately elastic. When workers are too few—when men cannot productively work longer hours—then time must be stretched.

Only the ingenuity of men and management limits the amount of work you can pack into an hour. And everywhere American ingenuity is now at work—among shop and office workers, farmers, engineers, managers—to devise more and better shortcuts.

▲ FOR INSTANCE—this week many offices will produce today's complex payroll records in one-half the time formerly consumed. This despite the new "load" added by the Withholding Tax.

▲ THE REASON—a new payroll plan by Shaw-Walker automatically transfers each figure to the several essential records.

After writing payroll figures just once, every record needed is completed, correct and up-to-date—ready for quarterly reports and government inspection. Rewriting of figures is entirely eliminated.

Entirely eliminated, too, are separate records for War Bonds, Social Security, Withholding Tax, employee insurance, employee hospitalization, union dues and all other ledger records of a similar nature.

Every pay day the statement you give to each employee includes:

(1) A complete record of earnings.

(2) A detailed list of deductions.

Summary of Morgenthau's New Tax Recommendations

could be suggested to attain the results we desire. . . .

To Last Through War Period

All of the tax increases I have mentioned are suggested as parts of a war program to be effective only until a date following the termination of the war, to be fixed by Congress.

Statement of social security:

There is one further suggestion I should like to make to this committee. It is not a part of the tax proposal, but it bears a distinct kinship to it.

I should like to suggest, as enthusiastically as I know how, that you amplify and extend the present social security system.

I have talked to many people who would be concerned with extension of the social security program which would involve increases in payroll taxes. I have met with interest and enthusiasm for broadening the provisions of the Social Security Act. I have been assured that the people who would have to pay additional payroll taxes see the wisdom of making the necessary additional sacrifices.

The President has announced plans to reestablish our fighting men economically when they return to build new lives on the sound foundations of the victory they will have won; and now we must also keep in mind on that same sound foundation of victory, working men, and farmers, and all other people on the home front, many of whom are not now covered by social security, must also build new and better lives.

Therefore, I suggest that the Congress seriously consider widening social security to cover practically all persons in the Nation, to increase employment insurance benefits and to provide benefits for temporary disability and hospitalization.

Social Security Increases

On the basis of bills already introduced in Congress, to do this would increase the social security taxes paid by employes by approximately $3,700,000,000. The necessary additional employers' payroll tax of $1,600,000,000 would make an annual increase of $5,300,000,000 for social security purposes.

A substantial increase in the social security payroll taxes would be of immediate service in diminishing the threat of inflation.

There is no pretense on the part of low-income people that they could comfortably pay these additional payroll taxes. It is known by them, and admitted to be a sacrifice, but it is felt by leaders and spokesmen for many such people, and by those of the people themselves with whom I have talked, that because we would be expanding social security's advantages and permitting workers to invest in their futures, this sacrifice will be made willingly.

If payroll taxes are increased, the income taxes should, at that time, be made substantially lower than I have suggested to avoid an excessive tax burden on the lower income groups.

Badoglio Says German Troops Cheered Hitler Death Rumor

By the Associated Press

Italian High Command Headquarters in Italy, Oct. 2 (Delayed) Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio declared today the new Italian government emphatically would be established on a democratic basis with "all former Fascist leaders definitely excluded."

He also revealed details of Benito Mussolini's fall, disclosing that when Fascism collapsed, unfounded rumors that Hitler had been assassinated swept "all the German soldiers in Rome into ecstasies of joy."

Tore Up Hitler Pictures

The happy Nazi troopers "embraced people in the streets," he said and "tore down photographs of the Fuehrer in their barracks and scattered the bits in open places."

Badoglio said "Fascism, at the end, broke apart like a rotten apple." He added that Mussolini, apparently fearing the fury of the people, wrote a note of thanks for placing Il Duce in protective custody.

Badoglio declared that as proof of fascism's failure to exert a hold upon the Italian people "not the slightest resistance to the change was met even from any of the seven million belonging to the Fascist Party proper." He added, "The morning after the announcement (of Mussolini's fall) not a single person even any longer wore the fallen regime's insignia."

Wanted to Join Church

Badoglio also revealed Mussolini had said he now wished to dedicate himself to the Roman Catholic Church. This fact was elicited from a letter to a sister posted from one of Mussolini's three places of confinement preceding his rescue by German parachutists.

(Since his rescue Mussolini has announced establishment of a new "Fascist-Republican" government for Italy).

Mussolini's only regard for Count Galeazzo Ciano is one of sheer hate, and Ciano revolted more and more against his father-in-law, Badoglio said, adding that finally, with Count Dino Grandi, one of the four leaders of the march on Rome and now a fugitive in Lisbon, Ciano was one of the two persons who made the fiercest attack against Mussolini at the fateful Grand Council meeting which ousted Il Duce.

Mussolini's intimidation by Hitler's verbosity was almost certainly a contributory cause of the Italian dictator's downfall, Badoglio said.

Outtalked by Fuehrer

When the two dictators met at Feltre on July 19, Mussolini's original intention had been to state plainly that Italy no longer was fit to continue the war. But instead of allowing him to speak, Hitler stormed for two hours uninterruptedly. By the end of the tirade, Mussolini's courage had evaporated, and he said nothing. The knowledge of this undoubtedly precipitated the attack on him at the final Fascist Grand Council meeting.

Whether, in fact, the Fascist leaders realized the council's decision sealed their own doom is obscure. Some thought it was an opportunity to clamber into higher positions, and others failed to realize that a complete crackup was inevitable.

"The general feeling against fascism was so intense that only the single act of getting rid of Mussolini was required to tumble the structure," Badoglio commented.

"I am delighted that my country is on the right road again," he said. "Italy always has been a friend of America and Britain. Many Americans and Britons fought with the Italians in the last war, and I am perfectly certain the same results will be obtained in this war."

Va. Pastor Resigns

Waynesboro, Va., Oct. 4 (AP).—Dr. J. G. Patton, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here since August 15, 1939, has announced his resignation, effective October 12, in order that he may accept appointment as secretary of stewardship of the Presbyterian Church, with headquarters in Atlanta, Ga.

Vinson to Back Tax Plan Today

Personal income tax exemptions for single persons would remain at $500, but for married persons they would be pared from $1200 to $1100, and for each dependent cut from $350 to $300.

The present system of withholding collections would be altered to fit the increased levies. While there was no exact recommendation, Treasury officials were reported leaning to the idea of drafting new collection tables, wherein the withholding rate would be listed as a fixed percentage of gross income, from 1 per cent on up.

Would Free 9 Million

Morgenthau estimated nine million individuals would be released from payment of income levies by repeal of the Victory Tax. Congressional tax experts were at work on plans whereby some substitute taxation would be applied to the nine million if the Victory Tax were discarded. Another 2.3 million individuals would be freed of Victory Tax but caught in the income tax by lowered exemptions.

Treasury suggestions called for boosting the corporation tax rates from 40 per cent to 50 per cent, to net an additional 1.14 billion in new revenue.

Estate and gift taxes would be boosted to yield 400 million dollars more by lowering the specific estate exemption from $60,000 to $40,000.

Marshall Opposes Proposal to Draft Fathers by Ages

men by the end of the year, the Navy will need 92,000 additional men a month in the first half of 1944. Hill and Barkley both said the Army and Navy will have to continue to induct fathers next year, after this year's 446,000 fathers' quota is filled.

Figures Presented

4. In answering to military committee inquiries on the number of trained troops in this country, Senator Reynolds read the Senate a letter from the War Department disclosing that on September 1 there were 1,172,000 enlisted men in continental United States with more than one year's training; 510,000, trained from one to two years; and 84,000, trained more than three years.

5. Senate leaders weighed possible inclusion in the Administration's Bailey substitute a provision for a Senate investigation of industrial utilization of manpower, to follow on the heels of the Wheeler bill's defeat.

General Marshall's letter on the Taft proposal said:

"From a military standpoint the induction of men within age groups in a predetermined order, namely, those under 25, next those between 25 and 30, and then from 30 to 38 is unsound. Men being taken at this time and in the future for military service are for use from 4 to 16 months hence, depending upon the type of training required. While the Army is now approaching its ultimate strength, a number of units must be filled during the remainder of this year. Most of these are service elements in which older men can best be used. Next year the bulk of men will, in all probability, be required for replacements to combat troops, and they should represent the younger and most vigorous types.

"If Selective Service is required to furnish the Army only those under 30 years of age during the remainder of this year, and those over 30 next year, it would appear that the younger men must of necessity be placed in service units in order that those units will be ready when required. The older men will then be received in large concentrations and must therefore be trained as battle replacements Such an arrangement appears unsound and not in the best military interest, since the only pool from which battle casualty replacements could be secured, if Senator Taft's proposed amendment is enacted into law, would be from that category of men older than 30 years, and those later becoming 18. Also it would appear unfair to the older men and to the service to so time their induction as to force the majority into combat units as loss replacements.

"The Army must meet its personnel requirements on schedule, and this cannot be done if the Army is required to reshuffle and retain personnel, because it has not received a fair and average cross-section of age and physical condition.

"The training of the men has been planned upon a basis of receiving such a cross-section. My sole concern is the procurement of men with proper qualifications in the required numbers and at the necessary times."

Taft took the floor and charged the letter as "every evidence of bing brought down here by people opposed to the (Wheeler) bill for the purpose of beating the bill." He contended the armed forces could draw on 1,200,000 youths he said are coming of age next year for 1944 replacements, and that 4-F's could be sifted for service battalions. Barkley and Hill replied that physically impaired men could not be used in service units facing the same dangers as combat troops, and denied the new 18-year-old group would be nearly sufficient to meet 1944 needs for additional troops and replacements.

U. S. to Remain Maritime Nation, Adm. Vickery Warns British

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery of the Maritime Commission disclosed here yesterday that Britain and America have started preliminary talks about postwar distribution of this country's excess shipping under a clear dictum that this country intends to remain a maritime Nation "with or without cooperation."

Just back from a production survey of British shipyards, Admiral Vickery told his news conference that he made this country's present and future maritime policy clear to a group of top British shipbuilders.

"I told them we have become a maritime Nation and intend to stay one. I said we could do this with cooperation, and if they didn't intend to cooperate, we would do it anyway."

Stresses Need for Cooperation

The admiral stressed, however, that cooperation in discussing and arranging for postwar shipping is obviously essential—"better than to wrangle about it."

He said the British had several suggestions about postwar shipping and indicated a willingness to cooperate. He added that these suggestions and some that he brought over to Britain "will be followed up soon." He declined to amplify, saying that some of this was in the State Department's jurisdiction.

In a formal statement released at the conference, Admiral Vickery said merchant ship production for September was "disappointing." While anticipating the greatest shipbuilding month in history, actual results showed the production of 160 vessels, 4 less than in August.

Conversion to other type of construction, the recent hurricane, and a strike contributed to the drop in expected production, which was set at 168 ships for September.

The "Brightest Spot"

The "brightest spot" in merchant ship production during the month, he said, was the "astounding" record of the 11-way Oregon Shipbuilding Corporation's Portland, Oreg., yard managed by Edgar Kaiser.

In August, the yard broke all existing productivity records by delivering 18 ships. In September, it built 24 vessels at the lowest man-hour cost in history.

Admiral Vickery pointed out that the British are producing ships in fewer manhours than we are on a national average, "largely because virtually every man over there is employed on actual ship construction while we have a percentage of our men working on safety, labor relations, and other phases of work to make life easier for our regular workers."

While stressing that he did not wish to see these "extras" eliminated, he said he "would like to see lower manhours in this country."

Asked whether charges of labor hoarding against shipyards were true and contributory to the general production picture, Admiral Vickery denied the charges, saying, "we are not hoarding any more men than needed for production."

Admiral Vickery said production would begin soon on the new, fast Victory ship, which "will have a real place in the postwar trade."

He disclosed that the British were already turning out a "competitive" ship much like the Victory. He indicated that our Merchant Marine would have to keep alert to avoid being outstripped in trade by this vessel.

Asked why the British were building cargo vessels anyway when an announced Roosevelt-Churchill agreement early in the war set them up as builders of war vessels while we were to concentrate on cargo ships, Admiral Vickery said, "That one's too much for me. I think I'll duck it."

Former Union Official's Secretary Pleads to Perjury

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Isadore Zevin, 39, secretary to George Browne while the latter was president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, pleaded guilty today to perjury and making false statements to a government agent.

Zevin's plea came on the eve of the trial of eight alleged associates charged with participating in the extortion of more than one million dollars from the motion picture industry.

Type Changes Keep September Plane Output Short of Goal

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

September aircraft production was "about the same" as August production, when 7612 planes were manufactured, informed officials revealed yesterday, commenting that important shifts in the program prevented production from climbing to a hoped-for 8000-a-month level.

Because possible effects of the production changes are likely to carry over into October, it was doubted that the 8000-a-month figure would be attained this month, although officials pointed out that the change should make for great improvements in the records of subsequent months.

Total Weight Output Up

Tentative September production figures indicated that aircraft production was slightly under August in numbers of planes produced but somewhat in excess of the August average weight figure. In addition to calling for greater numbers of planes each month, current schedules call for monthly increases in the proportion of heavier and more difficult types of planes.

The fact that the average weight has continued to climb, in spite of the setback in numbers, was taken as an indication that nothing is basically wrong with the program.

Previous setbacks in the program were blamed on manpower shortages, but officials acknowledged that changes in production, rather than manpower, was the main factor hobbling last month's production.

Three Types Are Changed

Production changes in three types are being made within the industry by the armed services:

1. Designs are being altered in the light of combat experience, requiring changes in the tools required to make each model. Frequently, more complicated models are called for.

2. Schedules are adjusted to step up the production of the most urgently needed types at the expense of those needed less urgently. Generally, the popular types are more difficult to make than the less popular models.

3. Production of some obsolete types is actually being halted, with manufacturers being asked to change over to the production of preferred types.

A final check is being made of present production figures for September before any public announcement is made, but officials expressed doubt that it would be in excess of the August figure.

One estimate placed September production "just around 7600."

Less Gas in West, Ickes Warns Solons

By the Associated Press

Petroleum Administrator Ickes called in 37 Western members of Congress yesterday and bluntly told them:

"There is going to be less gasoline in the near future in the 10 Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain States.

The Westerners, some of whom received the news indignantly, were told that the gasoline reduction for civilian purposes will amount to about 15,000 barrels a day.

When asked what changes would be made in the value of A, B and C gasoline coupons—now four gallons a week for each—Ickes said he had nothing to do with that.

The gasoline rationing chief for the Office of Price Administration, Charles Phillips, who was present, said the coupon value would be determined after the PAW sends over the exact supply figures.

TWA ANNOUNCES
improved service
TO PHOENIX

TWA announces the inauguration of new schedules between the East and Phoenix, Arizona, which provide improved service between Washington, D. C., and the increasingly important Southwest.

The new TWA schedules to Phoenix, recently authorized by the Civil Aeronautics Board, place the Arizona capital on TWA's transcontinental route and bring the important military training establishments of the Phoenix territory within easier reach of travelers from Washington.

TWA plans to augment present schedules between Washington and Phoenix as soon as conditions permit, making the Phoenix area increasingly accessible to Washington.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WAR PRODUCTION BOARD has just launched a new drive for iron and steel scrap, but the drive is imperiled by the apathy of the steel industry itself.

Last year the industry, worried, threw everything into the drive, spending a total of $1,800,000 for advertising, for speakers, and for the traveling expenses of school children who had won the right to christen Liberty ships.

This year, the industry is not putting up a penny. It would seem to be gambling on a quick end of the war, in which case there would be a sudden drop in the demand for steel and in the price of scrap. If the industry got caught with heavy inventories of scrap, there would be a big financial loss.

Whatever the reason, WPB officials complain that they are not getting the necessary cooperation from the steel industry.

The steel boys admit that there is a threatened shortage of scrap, with the requirement of 15 million tons for the last half of this year and an inventory of only about five million tons. And there is no question that the production of munitions, merchant ships and naval ships is far greater than last year.

Furthermore, shipments of iron ore have fallen off this year by eight million tons, due to ice and the month-late opening of Great Lakes navigation last spring.

Result of all these factors is that at a time when the demand for steel is at record levels, some of the Nation's open-hearth steel mills may shut down for lack of scrap—unless the scrap drive really goes places.

NOTE: War and Navy Departments are lending their trucks and men to help gather scrap in localities where local manpower and trucking are inadequate.

Insurance Lobby

Here are two recent developments in the giant fire insurance lobby to persuade Congress to exempt insurance from the antitrust laws: 1, the lobby is getting more intense; 2, there seems to be some mystery as to what Congressmen are really behind the bill.

On the House side of the Capitol, the bill exempting insurance companies from the Antitrust Act was introduced by able Representative Francis Walter (Democrat) of Pennsylvania. But when a high United States official went to see Walter and asked him if he realized the implications of the insurance bill, Walter admitted he knew little about it.

"I was helping out Hatton Sumners," replied the popular Pennsylvanian. "He wanted me to introduce it."

This has pointed the finger at Texas Representative Sumners, head of the Judiciary Committee, as a backstage leader of the insurance forces. Sumners is the man who recently inferred that most of his committee supported Congressman Cox in his fight with the Federal Communications Commission—shortly after which Cox bowed to public pressure and resigned.

The insurance lobby is sure to have a lot of other friends in Congress, for a lot of Congressmen operate insurance offices. Among them are Congressmen D'Alesandro of Maryland and Ploeser of Missouri, the latter having already made himself heard with the Justice Department.

Meanwhile, the National Board of Fire Underwriters has prepared a long statement which it is circulating to Congressmen, emphasizing State's rights for insurance companies.

Meanwhile also, it has leaked out that the fire stock insurance companies approached the life insurance companies asking them to participate in the lobby, but the life insurance companies declined. Also the mutual fire insurance companies have kept from the lobby.

Capitol Chaff

Representative Jim McCranery of Pennsylvania was paid an unusual tribute by the Senate when he resigned from Congress to become assistant to the Attorney General. Chairman Fred Van Nuys waived the customary procedure of submitting his nomination to a subcommittee for investigation, and the rule requiring a seven-day lapse before confirmation by the Senate also was waived. . . . Aggressive Representative George Bender of Ohio, who usd to be one of the most volatile GOP critics of the Administration, now has a liberal voting record few New Dealers can match since the Seventy-eighth session began. . . . Visiting Floridians call on Senator Claude Pepper of Florida, instead of ineffectual Senator Charles Andrews, when they want something done in Washington. A conscientious worker for his State, Pepper treats everybody alike, from affluent businessmen to job seekers. The lights usually don't go out in his office until 8 or 9 o'clock at night.

Mead's Detour

Lanky Senator Jim Mead of New York got "lost" from the rest of the party in the Southwest Pacific while touring the battle fronts with the Senate globe-girdling committee, but the experience gave him a firsthand view of the grim drama of war that his companions missed.

Mead left MacArthur's headquarters for a quick flight to a nearby island to visit with doughboys from Buffalo, his home town. Due to bad weather conditions, his return flight was delayed and the other four Senators continued on their tour without him. Mead had to hitchhop in three different planes before he finally caught up with his colleagues in Australia.

He will never forget the last hop. It was made from an island in the Southwest theater in a cargo plane. There were three others aboard—the pilot, a doctor and a wounded American airman who was being flown to a hospital in Australia. The flier had been shot up during a raid on the Japs in New Guinea, but he gamely made the best of the situation.

"We were flying in a bad storm," says Mead, "but that spunky young American didn't seem to mind it as much as the rest of us."

"Gee, I hope I get well soon, Senator, so I can go back with my gang and plaster some more of those Jap so-and-so's," the flier told Mead. "Please tell the folks back home that we're in this thing pitching, all of us, and that we're going to see it through."

Mead and his four companions hit it off excellently with MacArthur. They had had some misgivings about how MacArthur would react to their "investigation" of the Southwest theater, but the general was surprisingly cordial. One thing the committee was particularly interested in was hospital facilities for United States troops. MacArthur saw to it that they were given a full picture of this and everything else that they wished to study.

On their departure, MacArthur declared that it had afforded him "a great pleasure to meet you gentlemen, as well as an inspiration to me and those serving under me to know that the Senate is keeping in close contact with our operations here."

Laura Ingalls Completes Term

The Justice Department announced yesterday the release of Laura Ingalls, woman aviator, from th Alderson, W. Va., women's reformatory where she completed a sentence for violation of the Foreign Registration Act.

Miss Ingalls, accused of having failed to register as a German agent in the United States, was sentenced on February 20, 1942, to serve eight months to two years.

She was transferred from the District of Columbia jail to Alderson on July 14, 1943. Saying she was released last Friday, officials had no information as to her present whereabouts.

How to make Sure of getting Aged Whiskey NOW and AFTER the WAR!

The stocks of good aged whiskey are running low . . . being rationed by all good distilleries who want to have fine aged whiskey left for you after the war.

And not one bottle in a hundred now left on the shelves is an authentic ALL Rye whiskey!

So go to your B. P. R. dealer . . . remind him of the amount you have bought in the past . . . and ask him to save you your share of the B. P. R. apportioned to him.

Do this and you should always be able to get a reasonable share of the fine bonded B. P. R. that is being reserved for this territory.

B. P. R. sales are being regulated to make B. P. R. last for seven years (until more can be distilled and properly aged). Right now we're making war alcohol only!

Remember B. P. R. is not a mixed-grain whiskey. It is an authentic ALL Rye (98% Rye Grain!) The initials B. P. R. stand for Baltimore Pure Rye Distilling Company . . . and assure you the ALL Rye whiskey that has long been the favorite whiskey in the famous limestone country in Maryland, where great whiskey has always been made.

And remember, too, that B. P. R. is 100 Proof . . . so you can get more drinks per bottle . . . with just as much grand Rye flavor as if you used a bigger jigger.

You can recognize B. P. R. instantly by its steel-engraved, bank-note label!

War Not Over, AFL Warned By Patterson

By Joseph A. Loftus
Associated Press Staff Writer

Boston, Oct. 4.—Delegates to the American Federation of Labor's sixty-third annual convention today heard Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson caution them against the dangerous optimism of "fence-rail strategists" and cheered their president, William Green, as he called for an end to America's isolationism forever, and delivered a biting reply to critics of organized labor.

Patterson said that "some of you present have heard fence-rail strategists say that Germany will crumble this fall as Germany crumbled in the fall of 1918. Or that our victories in the South Pacific have softened up the Japanese, and that we can take them easily when the war in Europe is over. I have heard some talk like that—but not around the War Department.

1944 Year of Decision

The Undersecretary called 1944 the year of decision but said that does not mean the end of the war.

"At the moment, at least, Germany can make ends meet on industrial manpower despite the Army of 300 divisions she maintains in the field," he said. "We must not forget that Germany dominates Europe and feeds on Europe's industries and resources. The number of workers employed in war industries in Nazi-dominated lands was 23,000,000 at the start of the war. Now it is 35,000,000."

He added that although the German armies are retreating now, they are retreating in good order and "soon there will come a day when the forces of the United Nations will reach the lines where the Germans are determined to stand. That will mean fighting of the hardest kind."

Patterson also pointed out that our nearest air base to Tokyo now is 1800 miles away, three times as far as London is from Berlin—"and the distance from London to Berlin is considered fairly long for effective heavy bombing."

Isolationism Assailed

Green, in his keynote address, said:

"This war has taught us that America cannot isolate herself from the rest of the world. As a nation we face a new era in international relations when the war ends. Our first objective must be to assure lasting peace. We know now that peaceful intentions on our part are not enough, that we must assume our full share of responsibility that the war-like tendencies of other nations do not break beyond bounds."

Green asserted that 85 per cent of America's war material is produced by union labor and "we hope that the bullet that will finally end Hitler's life will bear the union label."

The AFL president said the "tragic figures" of the production front show that "casualties to American workers through accident since Pearl Harbor number 80,000 dead, seven million injured, on and off the job . . . Twenty thousand have been killed in the armed forces of our Nation. What a striking comparison.

"I do not claim that labor is giving more, or doing more because I know that our soldiers on the battlefield are giving their all, but I do want these figures to be presented to those who have denounced labor from one end of the country to the other."

25,000 New York Homes Lack Milk as Drivers Quit in Layoff Protest

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 4.—Stores, Restaurants, hotels and an exstimated 25,000 families in Manhattan were without milk today as 260 drivers for Sheffield Farms failed to report for work.

Edward O. Mather, executive secretary of the Milk Dealers Association of metropolitan New York, said all drivers at the company's 57th st. plant, serving 225 wholesale and retail routes, reported sick.

Union Head Uninformed

Mather said he did not believe any other plants were affected. Meanwhile, a company spokesman said the drivers' failure to report was in protest over a ruling of the National War Labor Board, effective today, approving a reduction in personnel on milk routes, following consolidation of some routes, and continuation of skip-a-day milk deliveries, a gasoline-saving plan instituted last spring on order of the Office of Defense Transportation.

A spokesman for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs (AFL) said the international vice president, Michael J. Cashal, was in Boston and unaware of the situation.

The Milk Dealers Association reported that the labor board decision by Norman J. Ware, special WLB representative studying the controversy over skip-a-day deliveries between the dealers and the AFL Milk Wagon Drivers Union, approved a plan to eliminate 950 employes of companies serving New York City, Westchester County and northern New Jersey, and provided for transfers and waiting lists for laid-off employes and reemployment of as many as possible in other crafts.

The Sheffield Co. emphasized that no strike was in progress, but only a mass failure to report for work. The spokesman said the drivers called the main office stating they would not be at work because of various illnesses.

Several employes, union members but regularly drivers of heavy-duty trucks, were used to fulfill a a U. S. Navy milk delivery contract and to make some deliveries to hospitals and institutions.

Candy Workers Strike

Pittsburgh, Oct. 4 (AP).—Five hundred employes of the D. L. Clark Candy Co. went on strike today, a week after notifying the War Labor Board of intention to quit work under the 30-day "cooling-off" period clause of the Smith-Connally antistrike law.

Pickets agreed to permit office workers to enter the building to make up payrolls.

The employes, members of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers Union (AFL), are involved in a dispute over time and a half pay for certain piece work. The strike was called after new contract negotiations broke down last week.

Harold S. Clark, president of the company, said he had offered the workers a general 10 per cent wage increase, or was willing to submit the entire case to the WLB. The union, he said, refused the offers.

The company sends 90 per cent of its product to the armed forces.

NO. 14 of a series ★ heroic episodes WORLD WAR NO. II

During the first landing on Guadalcanal, there was one moment of wavering uncertainty and doubt. These first Marines, as yet unchristened by battle, had been keyed up for Jap resistance on the beaches, then momentarily disconcerted by its failure to materialize, except in the form of sniping after they had penetrated into the interior. At a stream in the jungle, there was an open clearing that had to be crossed. Nobody ventured to lead, so a Colonel stepped out into the clear with his pistol drawn. Instantly a Chaplain, unarmed as all Chaplains are, stepped out right behind him. In that one heroic moment all doubts were resolved. Someone hoarsely whispered "if Holy Joe can go out there then who'n'ell are we to be standin' here and holdin' back!" And every last man of that landing party swung out into the clear, in step behind Holy Joe.

Chaplain on Guadalcanal by ERNEST FIENE

"if Holy Joe can go out there, who are we to be holding back?"

★ In the services the boys have a genial habit of referring to the Chaplain by the casual nickname of Holy Joe. There is no disrespect intended in this example of what Havelock Ellis called "their easy familiarity with divine things." On the contrary, it simply but eloquently indicates that in this war the troops have come to respect and to like their Chaplains as men first and as ministers afterward. And the Chaplains, in turn, have acquired a new breadth of both understanding and tolerance from their daily contacts with these boys from all walks of life. At least, that's what we have sensed from the letters we have had from Chaplains telling us of the tremendous morale-value of copies of Esquire in the base hospitals and embarkation centers. This first-hand observation, which has been even more frequently addressed to us by Army and Navy Nurses, has been repeatedly confirmed by the fact that the War Department is ordering constantly increasing quantities of Esquire for its post exchanges overseas. Thus Esquire's value as a morale weapon has been duly recognized, in the consignments of material allotted shipping space over all the oceans where our men have gone in this global war. ★ These are things that cold statistics can't reflect, of course, in the surveys made by independent sources in which it is estimated that copies of this Magazine for Men are now regularly reaching 34.2% of America's armed forces. But we are both proud and glad to witness them as so many extra evidences of our present avowed purpose to dedicate this magazine primarily to the entertainment and inspiration of our fighting men everywhere.

The Eighth Army's landing at Termoli confronted the Germans with a new threat to their left flank. Fifty miles north of the great air base of Foggia, the port is at the sea head of a good lateral highway that runs inland to connect with a main north-south trunk line running up over the Appennine Mountains to Rome.

General Montgomery's forces now stand almost directly eastward across the Italian Peninsula from Rome and are about the same distance from the Eternal City as are General Clark's divisions fighting out of Naples. By continuing its swift progress up the Adriatic shore, the British Eighth could make it virtually impossible for the Germans to put up a major defense south of Rome, or, indeed, south of the Po line.

Yesterday's crossings of the Calore by the Americans means that they now should be able to strike westward with little natural impediment.

Among towns listed as taken were Castelfranco, 20 miles northeast of Benevento; Ginestra, also northeast of Benevento; Montecalvo, 16 miles east of Benevento; Mirabella, Melito and Bonilo, all east and southeast of Benevento; Lapio, Altavilla and Arpina, south of Benevento; Motta, 28 miles northwest of Foggio, and Montemiletto, 11 miles southeast of Benevento. There was only a slight arc in the Allied line bisecting the Italian peninsula from Termoli to Naples.

Civitavecchia, north of Rome, was the target of a night attack by RAF and Canadian Wellington bombers. Pilots reported smoke and flame and a series of blue flashes after 4000-pound bombs hit in the railway yards and among electrical installations.

Flier Enjoys Self in Denmark

By British Information Services.

London, Oct. 4.—A series of fantastic adventures, including dinner next to six unsuspecting Nazi officers in occupied Denmark, a midnight birthday party for an English girl in a Danish forest, and a five-hour crossing of the Baltic in a leaky sailboat—has ended successfully with the escape of a RAF crewman to Sweden.

The hero of these adventures was Athur Johns, a RAF mechanic whose Lancaster bomber was set afire over Berlin. The bomber's pilot attempted to reach Sweden, but over Elsinore, Denmark, Johns and another crew member were ordered to jump from the plane, by then burning badly.

Descending from a pine tree into which he had parachuted, Johns was greeted by a woman who turned out to be the English-born wife of a Dane. Risking execution, she introduced him to a man in the Danish underground, who was preparing an escape to Sweden.

Hhe two men spent a week together, during which Johns promoted an expedition to a hotel, where they dined next to six uniformed German officers.

Johns and his companion then joined another Englishwoman, who was hiding in a forest with her two daughters. Dodging German patrols, they celebrated the eighteenth birthday of one of the girls at a midnight party in the forest, drinking her health in brandy.

Though the three Englishwomen managed to get hold of a boat, there was no room for the men. So—still casually—they raided a boathouse half a mile inland and, with the help of six Danes, carried a sailboat all the way to the shore in broad daylight.

Episcopalians Will Continue Talks on Merger

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Oct. 4.—Continuation of negotiations for organic union with the Presbyterian Church was voted by the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church today.

The bishops, here for the church's fifty-fourth triennial convention, adopted resolutions representing a compromise of majority and minority opinion within the joint commission on approaches to unity, and permitting appointments of new commission members.

The resolutions now go to the Housee of Deputies, which also is expected to approve them.

The "most stubborn problems" arising from negotiations, said the report of the commission, headed by the Right Rev. Edward L. Parsons, retired Bishop of California, are "with respect to orders of ministers and their functions and the manner of their ordination.

"Our Episcopal Church has maintained the threefold order of bishops, priests and deacons," the report continued. "The Presbyterian Church has been served throughout many generations by the single order of presbyters. We have required that all ministers be ordained by bishops. Among them the Presbytery has been the representative organ of the church in giving the authority to minister the word and the sacraments."

counterattacks and wiped out about 3000 Germans.

Three populated places were captured by the Russians attacking in the Vitebsk area, where 300 Germans were killed, and stout enemy counterattacks also were reported on the intermediate Mogilev front, Moscow said.

"The enemy is launching fierce counterattacks and trying to retain their positions at any costs," said the bulletin in describing the Mogilev front.

Soviet airmen entering the White Russian skies above the armies grappling in the marshes below knocked out 10 German tanks, 40 guns, and more than 100 trucks carrying war materials, it was said.

The daily Moscow bulletin issued last night termed all these engagements as only of "local importance," fought to improve Soviet positions.

The German high command conceded the struggle was continuing against "Communist guerrillas" in northeast Italy, and claimed annihilation of Yugoslav forces of unstated size south and east of Trieste.

The Liberation Army's communique also told of successes far inland, with the large fortified town of Tuzla, 50 miles north of Sarajevo, and Bijelopolje, 45 miles northeast of Niksic, falling to Bosnian and Montenegrin partisans along with large amounts of war material.

Fighting also was declared going on along the railway leading from Bihac eastward to Krupa.

Senate Facing Call For Postwar Stand

New Administration Pressure Expected To Be Placed on Upper House

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Administration pressure on the Senate to adopt a resolution placing that body specifically on record for a postwar organization offering collective security to this Nation's allies is slated to increase enormously within the next few days, authoritative sources insisted yesterday.

The situation is being fanned by swift military victories and the pending tripartite conference slated to be held almost any day now.

Bluntly, leaders here want to reassure Russia that this country will not turn back toward its post-World War I isolationism and drive Moscow into depending upon a strong postwar Germany to maintain a balance of European power, nonpartisan spokesman said.

Envoy's Assurances

Assurances to President Roosevelt yesterday by Ambassador Gromyko, newly appointed to represent Russia here, that his nation wants to maintain "friendly relations and closest collaboration" with this country in the postwar world were taken at their face value by many influential Senators.

Some of these maintained, however, that Russia still must remember that America, through the refusal of the Senate to ratify the League of Nations, retired into isolationism after World War I.

This factor, authorities held, explains, why, although the United States and Great Britain have consistently demanded unconditional surrender by Germany, and appear to favor the total disarmament of postwar Germany, there have been indications that Russia was not in complete agreement.

Heading-Off Move

Many leaders here feel that if collective security, backed by an expression of determination in the United States Senate which must ratify treaties, is offered Russia before Germany collapses and before a strong impetus toward a separate Russo-German peace can develop, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics will be relieved to throw in its lot with its present allies.

Prominent men here are confident that what Russia wants above everything else is peace in the postwar world to develop the resources of her tremendous country. If Russia is left doubting whether that security can be obtained through a postwar organization in which the four major allies, United States included, will participate, the natural move, leaders say, would be for the Russians to try to obtain such security by keeping a strong Germany.

Some Want to Split Reich

There is vigorous opposition here to any idea of Germany, which has twice plunged the world into disaster within a single generation, being permitted to become again a military power, which could again give expression to nationalist ambition. There are those who favor the splitting of Germany into three smaller nations.

Many of those who most ardently desire a strong postwar organization for the maintenance of peace feel that now is the strategic time to open the whole matter for the most intensive debate in the Senate.

In the first place, they say, events on the military front are moving so fast that the collapse of Germany may come before even the most sanguine military leaders predict. Senators returning from a 40,000-mile global tour revealed that French leaders had warned that the surrender of Germany appeared imminent, and that plans must be made.

Parley in Offing

In the second place the tripartite conference of Russia, the United States and Great Britain, when fateful and momentous decisions must be reached, are scheduled in the immediate future.

Senator Ball (Republican) of Minnesota, one of the sponsors of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hull Resolution, told the Senate yesterday that he could not see how the United States could have the weight it should have at the conferences unless the Senate speaks clearly and forthrightly on what it intends to do. Others of his colleagues agree.

It seems clear that events will bear out the statement by Chairman Connally (Democrat) of Texas of the Foreign Relations Committee that the Senate resolution would be more specific than the Fulbright resolution which passed the House by a 360 to 29 majority.

Certain to come up for discussion is the World Court, so that there may be a tribunal before which to try cases of nations initiating aggression. The question of a disarmed Germany looms large, as does the twin factor of security, the maintenance of strong armed forces by members of the postwar organization or agency, possibly through the general acceptance of universal military service in each signatory nation, including the United States.

Cunningham Named Head of British Navy

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 4.—Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, who won one of the greatest victories in British naval history when the Italian fleet gave up the fight, tonight was named First British Sea Lord and Chief of the Naval Staff, Britain's highest post.

Often termed the greatest British admiral since Nelson, Cunningham succeeds Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, who resigned today because of ill-health.

It was not made known immediately whether Cunningham would continue as commander of the Allied Mediterranean fleet.

Cunningham knows the Mediterranean perhaps as no other man. He defeated units of the Italian fleet in the first stages of the present war, and spent the last months before Italy's surrender attempting to lure King Vittorio Emanuele's warships from hiding for a finish fight.

The 59-year-old admiral also was attached to the Mediterranean Fleet in the first world conflict. He served in neighboring waters during the Boer War.

He was serving in one of his few land jobs—as deputy chief of naval staff—when this war broke out, and took his assignment as Mediterranean commander with a sigh of relief.

"I never was any damned good at office work anyhow," he told intimates.

Sir Andrew, considered the personification of the British Navy, is a strict disciplinarian and is known for his powerful voice.

Admiral Pound, 66, is called the "father" of Britain's present naval strategy which emphasizes aggressive action. He attended Prime Minister Churchill's warship conference with President Roosevelt, at which the Atlantic Charter was drawn, and later conferences at Washington.

Text of Talks of Gromyko and President

The text of remarks exchanged between Soviet Ambassador Gromyko and President Roosevelt when the former presented his credentials at the White House yesterday, follows:

Mr. President:

I have the honor to present to you the letter of credence by which the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics accredits me to you as Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and also the letter of recall of my predecessor.

In presenting you with the letter of credence I feel it my duty to state that the people of the Soviet Union entertain for the American people feelings of friendship and deep respect, and that the maintenance and further development of friendly relations and closest collaboration with them constitute the unswerving desire and aspiration of my government.

Russian-US Friendship

The friendship of the peoples of our countries is not accidental It is the expression of the basic interests of our peoples and our nations. This friendship has grown stronger under the grim trial of this war, in which the peoples of the Soviet Union and the United States fight against their common enemy—Hitlerite Germany and her allies in Europe. The bonds of friendship uniting our peoples are being still further strengthened by the blood which the best sons of our countries are shedding in the struggle against the German Fascist gangsters.

During the entire two years of this stubborn struggle, in which the heaviest burden of effort and sacrifices have fallen upon the Soviet Union, the peoples of the Soviet Union received and are receiving from the friendly American people not only moral, but substantial material support as well, in the form of airplanes, tanks, guns and other military material, and also foodstuffs. The Soviet people highly value this support, for which I express to you, Mr. President, and through you to the whole American people, the warm gratitude of my government and the peoples of my country.

The armed forces of the Allies, including those of the United States of America, are taking an increasingly greater part in our common struggle against Hitlerite Germany, and have already inflicted a number of heavy defeats on the cuning foe. The successes of the Red army in its struggle against the Hitlerite hordes during more than two years, its present victorious advance on the Soviet-German front, the remarkable successes of Anglo-American arms in North Africa and Sicily, as well as the developing military operations of the Anglo-American forces on the territory of Italy, have created a favorable military-political situation for inflicting decisive blows upon the hated enemy.

Favorable Turn to War

It is now clear that the war is turning in favor of the United Nations. However, for delivery of the final blow upon the enemy, exertion of the total strength of our countries and also of all the United Nations will be required. I firmly believe, Mr. President that the present joint struggle against our common foe, Hitlerite Germany and her allies in Europe will bring about closer collaboration of our countries in the postwar period, in the interest of general peace and security.

I believe that the mutual understanding and mutual confidence between our countries which are so necessary both during wartime and in the postwar periods as well, will be forced to the maximum degree in the first of our joint military effort. I am prepared to devote all my endeavors to further the consolidation of this mutual understanding and confidence between our countries, certain of the success and fruitfulness of our mutual effort, directed to the achievement of this high purpose. I hope Mr. President, that in executing my duties as the Ambassador accredited to you I may rely upon your support and likewise that of the Government which you head.

I beg you, Mr. President, to accept the assurance of the warm sympathy of the peoples of the Soviet Union for the American people, and the expression of full confidence in the further fruitful development and strengthening of the friendly relations between the Soviet Union and the United States of America, for the benefit and prosperity of our great peoples and of all friendly countries.

Welcomed by President

The President's reply—

Mr. Ambassador:

I am happy to receive from your excellency the letters by which the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics accredits you as Ambassador extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to the Government of the United States, and I welcome you in that capacity.

I am deeply gratified at the expression of your determination to develop further the friendly relations of understanding and confidence which so happily exist between our two countries and continue thereby the work of your distinguished predessor whose letters of recall you have handed to me. I can assure you that in the performance of this high task with which your Government has entrusted you, Your Excellency may count upon receiving the full cooperation and support of the Government of the United States.

The fortitude, courage and self-sacrifice of the armed forces and people of the Soviet Union in their terrible hours of trial have aroused the undying admiration of the American pepole, and we rejoice with the people of the Soviet Union in the evergrowing tide of success which is crowning Soviet arms.

Since the day of the treacherous assault upon your country by Nazi Germany it has been and it is the unswerving intention of this country to lend maximum assistance to your gallant armies. Our two countries are united against a common enemy. The Government and people of the United States have bent every effort to bring to bear as speedily and as effectively as possible the might of our armed forces against that enemy.

The enemy has felt, is feeling, and will to an ever-increasing degree feel the weight of the combined forces of the United Nations, and when the final and complete victory is achieved, as it will be, I know that every one of the United Nations will have made its full contribution toward that victory.

Our countries are joined together in a high cause and I fully share your confidence that the unity of purpose which binds our peoples and countries together in the prosecution of the war will be translated into a close and lasting collaboration together with other like-minded countries in the establishment of a just and enduring peace.

Grange Seeks CCC Extension, Hits Farm Subsidies

The National Grange yesterday joined farm groups urging Congress to extend the Commodity Credit Corp. and grant it "ample" funds for a program of price supports under agricultural products.

Master Albert S. Goss made it plain, however, that the organization still is definitely opposed to CCC use of any money for subsidy payments to prevent price ceilings going high enough to meet production costs.

As a substitute for subsidies, he suggested to the House Banking Committee that Congress should assure flexibility in retail ceilings, which he declared should not be pegged but allowed to fluctuate with changed conditions.

"There are few sources of political control more potent than that of cash subsidies of one kind or another," he said.

At a meeting of keymen of the business and finance division, John L. Vandegrift, acting chairman, revealed that work of the division is scheduled for completion by October 20, when house-to-house solicitation by the Metropolitan Division will begin.

Speaking of the 11 per cent increase in amounts needed by local agencies, Vandegrift said, "I don't believe there is any businessman present who is not spending that much more for labor and supplies, but the Chest agencies are giving greater service than ever."

George Barrett, staff executive, also spoke.

Postwar Air Planning Stirs Concern Here

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

High Government officials, here and in London are disturbed by some aspects of the discussion over postwar civil aviation. They are especially disturbed by the fact that, although the war is yet far from won, a clamor already has arisen over international air lines.

The emphasis right now, as they see it, ought to be on military aviation; for without victory all the talk about air lines to this and that place on the globe will be futile.

One high-ranking official, a man who is helping to shape American postwar policy on aviation, told The Washington Post that it was the "wild-eyed boys" here and in Britain who were forgetting this and sounding off now about international air lines.

He listed these reasons why such agitation is ill-timed.

1. It leads the public to believe that the war is nearly over, when, as a matter of fact, all we have done so far is to establish a series of beachheads before launching the main attack.

2. It is embarrassing to our military leaders, particularly to those in the field who are striving for harmony and cooperation between American, British and other Allied forces. Squabbling on the home front, with its note of international competition, might make things awkward for these military leaders.

3. The United States Government—President Roosevelt, Congress, the State Department and the Civil Aeronautics Board—is trying to work out a policy to meet the great international boom that is expected in aviation after the war. Much still remains to be done in this field. Therefore, the Government should not be maneuvered into a position now where it has to disclose its policy, or what there is of that policy.

4. Planning international air lines for the future is all right, but actually it is impossible to do this in any exact sense at this time. Nobody knows how the ultimate outcome will shape the postwar map. That being the case, nearly every plan for an international air line must be accompanied by an alternative plan.

But the overriding argument just now against quarreling over international airlines, this official said, is that it weakens the emphasis on military aviation and gives people a false idea about the nearness of victory.

British government leaders share these views. There have been many lively debates in the House of Commons over the question of postwar aviation, and in one of them Wing Comdr. J. A. C. Wright (Conservative) demanded that Britain and her dominions tell the United States "that the empire is not willing to be pushed off the map."

Deputy Prime Minister Clement Attlee enswered by saying that he was surprised that "in the midst of war anyone should make civil aviation a priority."

'Oyez, Oyez!

High Court Term Opened By Crier, 17

Oyez, Oyez, Oyez! All persons having business before the Honorable, the Supreme Court of the United States, are admonished to draw near and give their attention, for the Court is now sitting. God save the United States and this Honorable Court."

To this traditional chant, the nine black-robed justices of the United States Supreme Court took their places yesterday before a spectator-packed chamber as the 1943-44 term officially opened.

KENNING

If the voice that sang the chant wavered a very little, it was because young John A. Kenning, who wielded the gavel before the session, is brand-new to his job. The 17-year-old Germantown, Pa., youth had never before witnessed the initial assembly of the country's highest tribunal, his previous job being clerk in the administrative offices of the courts.

Now a prelaw student at George Washington University, Kenning is properly proud of his appointment as official crier. His predecessor, Perry Kippitt of this city, left the post vacant on September 15 when he joined the Navy. Kenning, an industrious figure about the Supreme Court Building, was appointed through the marshal's office at the request of Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone, he explained.

Impressive as ever, the session was nonetheless merely a formality. Fifteen minutes after the introductory "Oyez" faded into silence as the justices faced close to 300 visitors, court was adjourned until Ocober 21, when the real business of ruling in the Nation's wartime legislation begins.

Kenning, full of the dignity of his new office, did not permit his excitement to interfere with packing a good-sized lunch into his 6-foot-3 frame. Seated later before the huge desk in the marshal's office, which he inherited along with the job, he pushed his blonde mop out of solemn, blue eyes and searched his mind desperately for the words lately spoken in the court chamber.

"Isn't that the craziest thing," he grinned unhappily. "I've studied it until I know it backwards. Here," he settled on the folder describing "The Court and Its Work." "Where it says, 'The Crier's voice impressively calls . . .'"

'Regulated Competition' In Air Sought

By Kurt Kelman
Post Staff Writer

Following President Roosevelt's recent declaration of "freedom of the air" for international postwar flying, American Export Airlines yesterday urged adoption of a policy of "regulated competition" among all American airline operators.

W. H. Coverdale, president of the company, indorsed the policy declaration of 16 domestic airlines which have expressed their intention to enter world-wide commercial flying in a statement to the press. W. A. Patterson, president of United Air Lines, made public a letter to Chairman L. Welch Pogue of the Civil Aeronautics Board in which he asked for "legislation to prevent individual domestic airlines from entering the international transoceanic field."

United States Flag Air Transport

Arguing that "the first objective in our foreign policy must be insuring of the postwar position of United States flag air transport in international trade," Patterson's letter outlined the reasons of United's refusal to join the other 16 domestic airlines in their proposed policy of breaking "the withering influence of monopoly" in international air operations.

American Export Airlines is the only American airline operator except Pan-American Airways flying commercial overseas routes at present. Lining up clearly with the 16 domestic companies yesterday, Export Airlines' position leaves United and Pan American on the other side of the fence.

S. J. Solomon, chairman of the Airlines Committee for United States Air Policy, which comprises the 16 domestic lines and may soon be officially joined by Export Airlines, according to Morton Logan, company spokesman, construed Mr. Roosevelt's remarks at last Friday's press conference as indorsement of his committee's position.

Believes Berle Agreed

Logan yesterday also said that it was his understanding that Adolf A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State and chairman of the interdepartmental committee on aviation policy, was in general agreement with the principle of free competition among American airlines for international routes.

Other aviation sources have taken the view that the President had only referred to exchange of air rights between countries in his indorsement of "freedom of the air," without taking sides in the controversy of how the United States should solve its own problem of meeting foreign competition.

Dr. Cogan, 87, Dies; Founded Dental School

Dr. William N. Cogan, 87, founder and dean emeritus of the Georgetown University School of Dentistry and also a leader in establishment of the Naval Dental Corps, died yesterday afternoon at Naval Hospital. He had been in failing health for a year.

DR. COGAN

Born in Washington, Dr. Cogan was graduated from Mount St. Mary's College at Emmitsburg, Md., and received his dental degree from Columbian Dental School which is now a part of George Washington University.

After his graduation, Dr. Cogan started a dental college of his own which was taken over by Georgetown University in 1901. He remained dean there until 1912, when he was called by the United States Navy to help establish the Dental Corps. Dr. Cogan remained with the Navy for 15 years, and held the rank of lieutenant commander.

After returning to Georgetown Dental School, he served as dean until his retirement seven years ago, when he became dean emeritus. Dr. Cogan remained active at the school until the past year. In 1938, he received the medal of the Rhode Island State Medical Society for outstanding contributions in the dental field.

Dr. Cogan was a fellow of the American College of Dentists, and a member of the American Dental Association and of the District Dental Society. His home was at 1763 Columbia Road nw. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Sally Z. Cogan, and a daughter, Mrs. Walter Harrison, of New Orleans.

Arab Princes Start Tour Of Country

By Hanson H. Hathaway
Post Staff Writer

Guests in the Nation's Capital for the last week, the two royal princes of Arabia, the Amirs Faisal and Khalid—sons of King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia—left Washington yesterday for New York and a tour of the United States, while all indications were that the State Department was launching a long range program of economic, political and cultural cooperation with the Moslem world of 250,000,000 inhabitants.

On a closely observed schedule during their stay here, the two Amirs visited the opening of the Supreme Court as their last bit of sight-seeing under the department's auspices.

Speaking no English, the two royal brothers stared in black-eyed wonder as Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone, followed by his black-robed associates, came in on the echo of the voice of the court crier.

What happened before their oriental eyes was perhaps as intelligible to them as it would be for an American visiting a native court in far distant Saudi Arabia.

It was also somewhat obvious yesterday that the Amir Faisal, who holds a portfolio in his country similar to that of Cordell Hull in ours, had not come many thousands of miles merely to see this procedure, nor to pay a social call—the State Department's only official explanation of the visit.

Realties of war and peace clearly indicated that their visit here was a physical demonstration of Far Eastern affection for the United States, and for the purpose of obtaining a democratic appraisal of Middle-East and Pan Arab realities, political and economic.

U-Boat Bags 1 of 5 Bombers That Sank It

The story of a two-day running battle between a German U-boat and five American Liberator bombers, in which the submarine and one of the planes were lost, was told by the Navy yesterday.

It was the third recent official report of a U-boat shooting back against aerial attack instead of diving and, said the Navy, exemplifies "the German attempt to reduce submarine losses by using increased antiaircraft armament to fight it out on the surface."

Twelve naval airmen, apparently the entire crew of the destroyed United States bomber, are missing as a result of the battle. Two survivors of the submarine were picked up after it was sunk.

The engagement, it was said, took place last summer in the South Atlantic, and the submarine was one of the 90 reported by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill as having been sunk during a three-month period.

The Navy gave the story in this order:

A Liberator piloted by Lieut. Comdr. Renfro Turner, jr. of Earle, Ark., first spotted the U-boat and straddled it with bombs. It disappeared in spray. The U-boat surfaced again after Turner had waited an hour and a half, and he attacked again. That time the dive was slow, indicating damage.

His fuel running low, Turner returned to base, but a second Liberator spotted the raider, which dived before the plane, piloted by Lieut. (j.g.) John D. Burton, Salem, Mass., could attack. Darkness called a recess.

The next morning a bomber flown by Lieut. (j.g.) C. A. Baldwin, 401 Mason Creek rd., Norfolk, Va., found the U-boat again. Driving crewmen from their deck guns with machine-gun fire, that plane dropped bombs that got a flow of oil onto the sea and apparently damaged the submarine so that it could not dive.

Out of ammunition, Baldwin called two more Liberators, but by that time the Germans were shooting back.

Lieut. William R. Ford, Salt Lake City, was pilot of the plane credited with the actual "kill."

As he started his own run, Ford said he saw the other plane, commanded by Lieut. (jg) Goree Edward Waugh, Bluefield, W. Va., drop "a perfect straddle of bombs right across the sub from about 60 feet."

"As the plane cleared the stern of the sub," Ford related, "it seemed to pause for an instant, then continued on its course into the sea."

Ford continued on his own run and reported:

"We crossed over the conning tower at very low altitude through heavy spray and pulled out into a left turn to circle and investigate. The sub was not in sight."

Ford reported that later they passed over an oil slick and saw life rafts and about 10 or 12 survivors from the sub in the water. A surface vessel rescued two of the survivors. The others had disappeared.

Why Your Screens of Tomorrow Will Protect You for a Generation...

FROM the moment a home owner puts up a set of window screens, he starts paying heavy tribute to a ruthless and destructive enemy... rust. In a few short years, the average screens are useless, a sacrifice to this enemy which robs Americans of a billion dollars yearly!

After the war, this will no longer be true. The miracle of Corronizing will bring you window screens that last four times as long before rust destroys their usefulness! Screens that will give you far greater service for your money by protecting you for a generation!

Already tested and proved, Corronizing awaits only Victory to affect your daily life in hundreds of ways. Not only screens, but autos and planes...lawn mowers and tractors...food containers, milk pails, refrigerators, ranges... will carry the Corronized label. Wherever you see it, you will know that metal parts have been protected to give you up to four times as much use for your money!

New, simple and inexpensive, Corronizing was developed through years of research by Standard Steel Spring Company.

Today, we are making armor plate, bombs and other tools for Victory. So Corronizing must wait. But when peace returns, your dollars will buy more if you look for the "Corronized" label on the marvelous new products of America's manufacturing genius!

Restaurant Grading

No local bill that has come to our attention in recent months would carry the District so far along the road of retrogression as the sanitary code for restaurants proposed by Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee. The crying need of the District is more leeway in handling the problems of health, sanitation and public welfare. But this bill would freeze into congressional law a code of conduct for local restaurants—a code that may need changes next week to bring it up to date again. The effect of enacting this bill, even if it represents the most enlightened code that can be devised today, might be to cut off all progress in the regulation of Washington restaurants until the year 1977. When it imposes rigid controls upon the city, Congress frequently forgets about them for 20, 30 or 40 years. The only possible means of keeping such regulations up to date is to leave them under control of the local government.

In our opinion, moreover, this particular bill does not reflect the most enlightened practice of the present day in the regulation of public eating places. It would set up A, B and C ratings for restaurants. It would prescribe in detail the type of floors, walls, screens, lighting, ventilation, utensils and equipment an A restaurant should have. Less exacting requirements would be imposed on B restaurants and all which couldn't make this grade would be lumped together as C restaurants. We do not believe that restaurants can be appropriately graded as if they were grain or meat; the very suggestion that inferior restaurants are sanctioned by law would breed dissatisfaction with the law. Congress would thus be under constant pressure to pass new bills changing the requirement as to paint on restaurant walls or screens on cafe windows to enable this or that chow shop to get a B rating. How can anyone seriously think that Congress has time to legislate on such fiddlefaddle?

The one obligation which public authority has in respect to restaurants is to see that all of them meet adequate standards of cleanliness and sanitation. Restaurants failing to meet such standards should be put out of business without delay, and those which do meet the standards should not be harassed by grades such as are given to school children. The public can be relied upon to do its own grading among the restaurants which comply with the uniform sanitary code. When the towering demerits of this bill are brought together, the real mystery is how it comes to bear the name of Senator McCarran, for he has sponsored many of the most constructive measures enacted for the District in recent years and is a stanch advocate of progressive local reforms.

Democracy At Home

Mr. Selden Menefee directed the attention of our readers a few days ago to the deplorable habit of suburbanites living just across the line in Virginia and Maryland in failing to register and cast their votes in local elections. Perhaps their disfranchisement in the District before they moved into the suburbs accounts for this neglect in many instances. But whatever the cause, it is evident that the large and flourishing communities growing up on the outskirts of the Capital will suffer from such civic apathy.

It is strange indeed that people whose sons, brothers, husbands or friends are out fighting for the principles of democratic government should fail to take advantage of the political rights which our democratic system gives them. But such is too often the case. We need to be constantly reminded that the democracy which we prize so highly is here in the grass roots close to home (except, of course, in the District of Columbia). Reminders of this sort are particularly pertinent just now because of the approaching local elections in Arlington County and, on the other side of the Potomac, the approaching deadline for declarations of intent to become citizens of Maryland.

The Montgomery County League of Women Voters points out that new residents will not be eligible to vote in 1944 unless they register as Maryland citizens before November 6 of this year. It will be too late for them to think about their civic duties next year when interest in the presidential campaign reaches the boiling point. The Post suggests that the least we can do on the home front is to participate, wherever there is opportunity, in the democratic process which we are defending on the battlefield at a cost of so much human energy and blood.

Moderate Tax Program

All the harsh words in the dictionary will probably be hurled at the Treasury's tax program sent to Congress yesterday. It will be called "harsh," "drastic," "confiscatory" and perhaps even "brutal." But these epithets will come from people who forget or ignore the fact that the Nation is in the midst of the most costly war in its history. If we start from the viewpoint that we are engaged in total war and that the Government has claim upon our lives as well as our incomes until this threat to our national security is overcome, then the taxes suggested by Secretary Morgenthau can be more accurately described as "mild," "moderate" and "inadequate."

If we wish to be realistic, moreover, we must remember this aspect of the picture as presented by Treasury: Income payments to individuals during the current fiscal year are estimated at 152 billions, available goods and services that can be purchased with that income at 89 billions. Personal taxes at present rates will take about 21 billions, Mr. Morgenthau said, leaving about 42 billions of "excess spending money." All the new taxes proposed by the Treasury, including taxes on corporations and estates as well as excise and income taxes, would bring in an estimated $10,500,000,000. What the Treasury is asking in this time of national peril, therefore, is that we as a people give up less than one-fourth of our "excess spending money" through payment of additional taxes.

In the face of these facts we must consider this bill very moderate, indeed. It would not mop up all the excess buying power which is pushing hard upon price ceilings. So it would not remove the danger against inflation. Even with this addition to taxes, we would not be paying half the current expenses of the war. The Treasury proposes, moreover, to refund part of the taxes to be collected under this program after the war is over. We believe that the strongest criticism of the bill, therefore, is that it does not go far enough.

Details of the program will necessarily have to be carefully examined in Congress. But there are a number of changes that will doubtless meet with hearty approval. Certainly, the simplification that will come from abolition of the Victory tax in favor of higher income taxes is a desirable reform. The proposed luxury taxes on gum, pop, beer, liquor, tobacco and travel will be considered a nuisance, but they will help to moderate spending and perhaps release manpower for more essential industries as well as bring additional revenue into the Treasury. Perhaps the list of commodities to which such taxes are to be applied can be lengthened by Congress. Nuisance taxes are, after all, a very minor annoyance when they are placed beside the sacrifices our men in uniform are asked to make.

We must look at this tax program as an integral part of the war effort. It will compel many citizens, as Secretary Morgenthau says, to take in their belts. But what does taking in a belt amount to compared to risking one's life or being removed from one's job for months or years at a time when civilian wages are highest? Citizens who are called upon only to pay these taxes ought to realize that the sacrifice they are making is, comparatively speaking, a privilege.

Home-Front Victory

The Nation has gone over the top in the greatest fund-raising drive in history. Although the final total is not yet tallied, Secretary Morgenthau was able to tell the country even before the conclusion of the campaign that the Third War Loan quota of 15 billion dollars had been surpassed. The record is a testimonial to the zest with which Americans respond to an opportunity to take a direct part in the national war effort. It is the particular virtue of the voluntary method of selling bonds that it affords such an opportunity. Secretary Morgenthau's faith in this method has been handsomely vindicated.

The Third War Loan Drive was a great organizational achievement. People, even when they have idle money in their pockets or their bank accounts, do not voluntarily purchase bonds unless they are stimulated and prodded to do so. In this campaign, the stimuli were omnipresent. The prodding was imaginative and dramatic, yet without resort to the sort of invidious social pressures which amount to little more than an ugly and uneven form of compulsion. Very high praise is due Mr. Theodore R. Gamble, director of the Treasury's War Finance Division, for the conception and management of the drive.

Approximately five million volunteer workers in State and local community organizations took part in this tremendous fund-raising effort. Theirs was the drudgery of house-to-house canvassing, of personal appeals to office mates. They took part in the presentation of special war bond theatrical performances and war bond rallies. Stars of the entertainment world, the motion picture industry, radio, newspapers, banks, retail establishments and professional men and women of every description—all participated wholeheartedly in this gigantic national undertaking. They can find satisfaction in the knowledge that they have made a direct contribution to the winning of the war.

The Third War Loan Drive has had a collateral benefit, less tangible than its financial accomplishment but perhaps no less significant. It has given a great many Americans of diverse points of view the healthy experience of teamwork. Its success stemmed from the fact that every facet of American life was included. Labor and management cooperated effectively for a common purpose. Political differences were submerged. People of varying social and economic backgrounds worked shoulder to shoulder—and learned that their community of interest overrides the distinctions among them. As Secretary Morgenthau declared the other day, the war bond program has been "a great unifying influence on the home front."

Radio And Free Speech

Quite a tempest of accusation and recrimination has been set loose by the recent announcement of the Columbia Broadcasting System that hereafter its news announcers will confine themselves to a strictly factual and objective presentation of the news and refrain from slanting it according to their own politico-ethical notions. The order is particularly rough on the boys who call themselves "analysts" or "commentators." It recalls a story (possibly apochryphal) to the effect that the late Frank A. Munsey had the habit of walking up and down the room where his editorial writers were at work and repeating sternly at intervals, "Mind now, no opinions, no opinions!"

One CBS commentator, Mr. Cecil Brown, has indignantly resigned. Mr. Walter Winchell (a Blue celebrity) has implicitly accused the CBS of censoring news according to the prejudices of its own executives and in the interest of the business organizations who provide the revenues by sponsoring commercial programs. Mr. Joseph Q. Riznik, former news rewrite man for Columbia, appears to have filed charges to this effect with the Federal Communications Commission. However, the CBS director of news broadcasts, Mr. Paul W. White, retorts in effect that he is merely attempting to get the news broadcasters to conform to the standards and practices which have been traditional in newspaper offices for a great many years.

The controversy raises a most complicated and important problem. On most newspapers—in theory at any rate—a sharp distinction is drawn between news and editorial matter. The news reporter is trained to confine himself to facts, though it is quite possible for him to enhance "news values" by giving emphasis to some facts and subordinating or omitting others. Whether a shift in emphasis which seriously disturbs the proportionate relationships of the facts does not involve a distortion of reality is a deep philosophical question about which it would be possible to argue endlessly. At any rate, it is most frequently done in the interest of "the story" rather than of any ulterior purpose.

Newspaper editorials, of course, are frank expressions of opinions by the newspaper itself and are recognized as such by the readers. But journalism is an open field into which anyone who can buy or hire a printing press or even a mimeograph machine can enter. There are no physical limitations beyond the supply of pulpwood to the number of newspapers, books or pamphlets which can be published simultaneously. Radio occupies a different position. The number of broadcasting stations which can operate at the same time in the same air is very definitely limited by physical laws. Thus a radio chain becomes a quasimonopoly, which, like other monopolies, must be regulated in the public interest. Full freedom of speech on the air is also a physical impossibility, since there can be neither enough stations nor enough radio hours to permit more than a handful of the myriad possible opinions on every controversial issue to find expression.

In view of these facts the FCC has laid down the reasonable policy that a broadcasting company may not have an editorial policy. Every station is expected to render a well-rounded service and to refrain from presenting only one point of view. If a broadcaster fails to render this type of public service, his license is likely to be in jeopardy. The FCC has no power to censor the programs of any station, but it does require the broadcasting companies to censor their own programs in the public interest. Some of them may go to extremes in limiting expressions of opinion, instead of seeking to present a large number of viewpoints. But if editing is done to eliminate bias, a station is not likely to run afoul of the regulating agency nor is it likely to lose public esteem. It is use of these public facilities to color and distort the news or to propagandize one point of view that must be watched.

WITHOUT SONG

To the innocent heart, this bird
Of the arched and slender
Neck, of wings beating
A foamed and furious thunder
Over wide waters until lost
To the eye in the long
Reeds and ivory lilies,
Is a bird without song.

But open its breast,
And though never the blade shall find
The delicate shape of sound,
From the lapsed throat,—
To echo forever in a dimmed
And desolate mind,—
Shall fall one sweet
And terrible note!

Chinese Council

Now Meeting

PROBABLY ONE of the strangest and yet one of the most encouraging political phenomena in a wartime world is the body of 240 people now meeting in Chungking, wartime capital of China, known as China's People's Political Council. It is a representative body, and yet not wholly a representative body. It is a group with limited power, and yet a group with tremendous power. Foreign diplomats watch carefully the resolutions which come out of the semiannual meetings of the People's Political Council in China, for they have discovered that these resolutions are the signposts which guide the policy of China's National Government.

The People's Political Council, though in many ways comparable to America's Congress, is not a law-making body. It functions instead by interpellation and criticism. It approves and disapproves. It tears apart and puts together again. It has the right to examine the head of any government department. And what it recommends to that department head, he is under obligation to carry out.

Yet, oddly enough, the council began as a chosen, not an elected body. It was chosen by the very men whom it was chosen to criticize.

Now almost 70 per cent of its membership is elected.

Unusual Assembly

This unusual assembly looks upon itself as an interim body carrying on until the day, now definitely set within the first year after the end of the war, when the larger and completely representative People's Congress will be convened to adopt China's permanent constitution. Meanwhile, the People's Political Council serves to interpret the voice of the people to the National Government as far as it can.

The People's Political Council was formed within the first year after the war in China began, "in order to unify the national strength, to utilize the best minds of the nation, and to facilitate the formulation and execution of national policies."

The first council, organized in the summer of 1938 in Hankow, had 200 members, all of them chosen by the Kuomintang, the party which at present holds the reins of government under a type of trusteeship.

Two years later, when the second council succeeded the first, there were 240 members, 90 of whom were elected by the people of those provinces and counties which had developed their own local democratic representative bodies.

By 1942, when the present third council was formed, 164 of the 240 members were elected by the people—nearly 70 per cent of the total.

Perhaps one of the reasons that this council has pushed itself out of the ranks of an appointed body into the ranks of an elected body, is because of the unusual composition of its membership from the start. Rather than being a group of people representing purely the different geographic divisions of China, it includes representatives of racial minorities, representatives of political parties and representatives of various occupational groups as well as representatives from the various provinces and counties. Thus, in spite of the fact that part of the membership is still appointed by the Kuomintang, the appointments must necessarily cover a certain cross-section of the Chinese people.

People's Political Council

Another unusual feature about the People's Political Council is its Presidium, which provides for a rotation of chairmen at the sessions. Until this current session, the Presidium was made up of five persons, with Generalissimo Chiang as the chairman of the group. In the interests of more democratic control two things have been changed at the present session. Generalissimo Chiang has resigned his membership on the Presidium, and three new members have been added. The Presidium now consists of seven persons, one of whom is a woman. A leading member of the Presidium is Dr. Chang Po-lin, who is member of no political party, and is outstanding in China as an educational leader, for many years president of Nankai University, the first Chinese University to be a target for Japanese bombs. The woman member is Dr. Wu Yi-fang, outstanding woman educational leader, president of Ginling College for Women, who is in the United States at present on a special mission for the government.

The present period of political tutelage was the second period outlined by the founder of China's Republic, Sun-Yet-sen. It is to be followed, according to his plan and also according to the recent promise of the present Chinese Government leadership, by a period of real political democracy. This council is the advance unit leading the war into the final stage. The People's Political Council serves as a bridge leading from the one period of China's political development into the next.

Goebbels' Warning

By Barnet Nover

Fighting Defeatism In The Reich

IN A SPEECH which he made at the Sportspalast Sunday, Dr. Goebbels took pains to deny that there is any great amount of defeatism in Germany.

That phenomenon, said the Nazi propaganda minister, is exhibited only by "quite isolated individuals." And he added that "our enemies will greatly deceive themselves if they consider these individuals a serious opposition to the war."

Yet in the same speech Dr. Goebbels found it necessary to warn that the German government will behead any German "attempting to undermine the belief in victory."

OBVIOUSLY, if the Nazi regime finds it necessary to resort to such drastic measures to fight defeatism there must be a good deal more of it in Germany than Goebbels is willing to admit.

Of course there is. It would be extraordinary if present-day Germany were not shot through with defeatism and despair, The great military triumphs of the first years of the war are now receding into the dim distance. The last twelve months have made it clear to the Germans that the shoe of victory is now on the other foot.

During that period Germany has had to give ground in Egypt, Libya, Tunisia, Sicily, Southern Italy and, above all, in Russia.

The principal cities of the Reich are being laid waste by Allied bombs. The great hopes placed in the U-boat campaign have proved illusory. And the defection of Italy has added to the growing German alarm.

It is also true that while the Germans are first-rate fighters when they are winning they begin to develop a surrender psychosis when defeat stares them in the face. What happened after Jena in the Napoleonic erea, after the Battle of Amiens in 1918 and at Tunis-Bizerte in 1943 proves that.

DESPITE ALL that, no conclusion could be more dangerous than that Germany today is at the end of her rope whether in fighting strength, materiel or morale.

When Hitler plunged Europe into war he did so only after the most careful and painstaking preparations. These preparations were not only military and industrial but also psychological. There was to be, this time, no repetition of 1918. By 1940 he was convinced that ghost had forever been laid.

He was wrong. After Stalingrad the possibility of a second German defeat in a quarter of a century began to loom larger and larger in the German consciousness. But as a result of the strenuous measures which the Nazi regime has taken to counteract the mood, German defeatism has thus far been passive and negative rather and actiye and positive, individual rather than collective, a mood of hopeless resignation to fate rather than a determination to destroy the elements responsible for Germany's plight.

IN FIGHTING DEFEATISM the Nazis have been their ruthless selves. Goebbels' warning of the fate in store for those who oppose the war represents nothing new. The same thing has been said repeatedly by Hitler and Goering and Goebbels himself. The Nazi regime has never shown any mercy to those who have disagreed with its policies.

But Goebbels is fully aware that in a runaway situation it is not enough to punish refractory individuals or even to threaten the masses. From the very beginning of the Nazi assault on civilization he and Hitler and Himmler and their agents have seen to it that the German people, as a whole, were made the willing or unwilling accomplices of the Nazi criminals.

IT SOUNDS like a fantastic paradox, but it is literally true that in this war the Germans have fought on long after all hope of victory had begun to fade because of the very hopelessness of their situation.

Wherever the German army has gone it has acted as a band of robbers, rapists and butchers. The hatred of Germany and the Germans in Europe today is greater than the hatred ever felt for any nation and people in the history of the world.

The Germans know this and Goebbels has been and is employing this universal hatred of the Germans to keep the German people in line.

THE ACTS of vandalism perpetrated by the Germans in Naples were part of a deliberate policy.

It is true that, in the process, installations of military value were destroyed. The destruction was also designed to intimidate the local population and serve as a reminder to Germany's remaining satellites of what would happen to them if they followed the Italian example. That it added fuel to the fires of hatred felt for the Germans was, in the eyes of the Nazis, an advantage rather than a disadvantage.

The Nazis are not worried over the long-range consequence of this hatred. They have no interest in the ultimate fate of Germany. They are interested only in their own fate. If they are forced to go down they are quite willing to have Germany, all Europe, go down with them. In the meantime, as they see it, the hatred for the Germans which they have engendered all over Europe serves them as a barrier against internal revolution in the Reich, against the collapse of German morale.

This program of "Strength Through Fear" will not work forever in the Reich. But it has worked up to now.

Albania and Greece

I was rather gratified to read in the September 26 issue of The Post a letter from His Excellency, M. Cimon Diamantopoulous, under the heading "Greece and Albania," in which the Greek Ambassador took forceful exception to a dispatch from Istanbul, appearing in The Post of September 19, because it enumerated Albania among the countries friendly to the Allies.

"One is surprised," the Greek Ambassador writes, "to find Albania in the first (friendly) group, and questions what she has done to merit such a place of honor."

Speaking as far back as March, 1942, before the cadets of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Secretary Knox stated that the Albanian people were doing their share in the fight against Fascism.

And on December 10 last, the Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, issued a special statement—in which the authorized spokesman of the United States Government made the following declaration:

"The Government of the United States is not unmindful of the continued resistance of the Albanian people to the Italian forces of occupation."

The question arises, therefore, whether credence is to be given to the pronouncements of official representatives of the United States who have no ax to grind in Albania, or to the Ambassador of Greece who, in the very same letter to The Post, claims for his country almost one-third of Albania's territory.

And anyone who wishes to refresh his memory as to whether the Albanians did anything to oppose Italian domination or to even protest, has but to turn to the files of the world press for the week ended on April 9. There he will find, in dramatic front-page dispatches, that the Chamber of Deputies rejected unanimously the Italian ultimatum, that King Zog from Tirana and myself from Paris appealed to the governments of London, Paris, Athens, Belgrade, etc., asking for help against Mussolini's aggression. That we never received even an acknowledgment on the part of those governments which did not raise a finger in protest against the dastardly sacrilege that was committed on Good Friday. Yet, in spite of that, the Albanian people of a little over a million souls did rise to resist the invader's forces which were backed by an empire of nearly 60 million people.

CONSTANTINE A. CHEKREZI.
President, Free Albania Organization.

I have just read with much surprise the letter on Albania written by Mr. C. Diamantopoulos, Ambassador of Greece, and published in The Post of September 26. This letter is full of amazing, inaccurate statements that should be beneath a first-rate diplomat like Mr. Diamantopoulos. He is incredibly mistaken in what he says about Albanian guerillas.

But Mr. Diamantopoulos is even more unjust and mistaken when he speaks of "the Greek character" of the population of southern Albania, which he calls northern Epirus. Has Mr. Diamantopoulos forgotten that this area has a population of 250,000 and that at least 150,000 of these are Albanian Mohammedans, who, even by the wildest stretch of the imagination, cannot be said to be "Greek in character"? Has he forgotten that southern Albania, or northern Epirus, has been the center of Albanian nationalism during the last 30 years? Has he forgotten that the most militant leaders of Albanian nationalism have come from southern Albania, and that most of them have been Orthodox Christians? Has he forgotten that when the Greek "army of liberation" entered the town of Koreha during the Italo-Greek War, one of its first acts was the burning of the church archives because they were written in Albanian? Has he forgotten the Conference of Ambassadors of 1923 and the Protocols of Florence of the same year? If he has, then I take the liberty of reminding him here.

The Way We've Always Wanted To Run A Paper

"Marshall Field of Chicago celebrated his fiftieth birthday by coming into possession of 70 million dollars from his grandfather's estate. This followed an inheritance of 46 million dollars some years ago. Mr. Field will continue his newspaper publishing activities."—News item.

Mr. Field (at the morning newspaper conference)—Well, what's new? I trust we're still losing money.

Managing Editor—Have you seen that special series I'm running?

Mr. Field—That's the one that made three of our big advertisers cancel their ads, isn't it?

Managing Editor—Four, wasn't it?

Mr. Field—I hope so. Nice work, anyhow. But there must be some easier way to lose money.

* * * *

Managing Editor—We could get a few libel suits, I suppose.

Mr. Field—No, I'm told that nothing you can say about anybody these days will make them sue for more than two or three hundred thousand dollars, and even then they don't press it. They just want publicity. How's the circulation going, heaven forbid!

Circulation Manager—We're putting on lots of readers. But with the rising costs of paper and delivery . . .

Mr. Field—Never mind about rising costs of anything. It's not good policy.

Circulation Manager—Delivery costs alone went up $50,000 last month and . . .

Mr. Field—Not enough. You've got to do better. Has the business office anything to report?

Business Manager—Everything is very encouraging. We were threatened with a big profit a few weeks back, but I managed to avert it.

Mr. Field—It was a close call, I understand.

Business Manager—Pretty harrowing, if I do say so. I discovered just in time that business was growing tremendously. If I had waited another week it might have been too late to take rigid steps.

Mr. Field—What did you do?

Business Manager—I dropped a lot of advertising and notified our salesmen to have nothing to do with new advertisers.

Mr. Field—That's the spirit! You boys have got to be alert. Anybody could lose money easily a few years ago. But today it calls for brains and quick action. You must be on your toes all the time. Otherwise I will wake up some morning and find I have just as much money today as I had yesterday. What's the promotion manager got to report?

Promotion Manager—I'm depressed. I went way over my budget, but I can't lose money for you in the manner you expect. I've got to have help.

Mr. Field—All right, get help. You know the old proverb, two can lose twice as much as one.

Secretary—PM is on the wire.

Mr. Field—Now there's a paper! It never has taken a dollar's worth of advertising in its life. That's cooperation!

Secretary—And, Mr. Field, there are delegates from every department in your office. They demand more money.

Mr. Field (leaping up smartly)—Goody! Goody!

Secretary—And those two new presses are no good. The foreman says you will have to buy two new ones despite the rise in prices.

Mr. Field—Fine!

Secretary—And there's a lawyer out there to see you. He says its somehing important.

Mr. Field (alarmed)—Dammit! That probably means another inheritance!

VANISHING AMERICANISMS

"Here's a dime; get yourself something to eat."

"Shut it off, quick! The tank's full."

"I'll take the seventy-five cent dinner."

"Go out and buy me two or three five-cent good magazines."

"Let's look over the meat specialities first."

"Leave the catsup bottle on the table, mister."

WHY AUTOISTS GO MAD

"Washington, D. C.—The Office of Price Administration today said there was no immediate plan to increase the gasoline allowance to A-card holders by an advance in the date of current coupons."—N. Y. Herald Tribune.

"Washington, D. C.—Liberalization of A-card gasoline rations seemed assured tonight by steps which enable the OPA to reduce the validity period of A coupons."—N. Y. Times.

Two second-hnad car dealers, one calling himself "The Smiling Irishman" in his radio commercials and the other calling himself "The Laughing Irishman" have gone to court over the matter. And—believe it or not, it develops the real names are Holzer and Juliano! And Jack Donnelly thinks it is a matter for the giggling sons of St. Patrick.

We can't understand why America should have any trouble finding proper training ground for commandos. Just let the candidates participate in that 5 p. m. rush of commuters for suburban trains every night.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Shall We Govern Germany?

THE QUESTION to which the Allies must find the answer at Moscow is what kind of armistice do we intend to give the Germans when they surrender. The answer to this question is the key to the future of Europe and of the grand alliance of the United Nations throughout the world. If we agree on a righteous and workable policy for Germany, we shall be able to face all the other questions of the settlement with confidence. If we disagree on Germany, we shall become hopelessly divided everywhere.

LIPPMANN

In regard to the German armistice the critical point is, I submit, whether, and if yes then for how long a time and in what way, the Allies mean to occupy and to govern Germany with their armies. Disarmament, the punishment of war criminals, the liquidation of the Nazi party and of the military caste and of German economic imperialism, reparations—will have to be enforced. The question is whether it is desirable and necessary to enforce our terms by occupying and governing Germany for a considerable period of time. In other words, must we and should we govern Germany in order to control Germany during the probationary period?

IN THE western countries it has generally been assumed that we must occupy and govern. We do not know with certainty the Russian view. But there are several indications—their sponsoring the Free German Committee and their disapproval of AMG, our plan for the military government of occupied territory—which give us ground for thinking that the Russians may not believe in an Allied occupation and government of Germany.

Now there are compelling reasons why Americans, and also the British, should have an open, and indeed an hospitable mind, to the idea of controlling Germany without a prolonged occupation and military government. We shall want to concentrate as quickly as possible our whole military energy upon the quickest possible defeat of Japan, and we shall not wish to maintain armies in Europe any longer than we have to. But beyond that, it is evident, I believe, that to occupy and govern as big a nation as Germany is a most formidable undertaking, and to carry it out for a long period of years by the united action of our complicated alliance would call for a degree of unanimity and daily cooperation which we have no right to count upon.

Therefore, provided there is an alternative to prolonged occupation and government, the presumption is in its favor.

THERE IS, I believe, an alternative. It is to fix the German frontiers finally in the armistice itself, to enter Germany for the purpose of disarming her, of arresting the criminals, of recovering the loot, and of making visible the reality of her defeat, and then to retire outside the frontier except perhaps to hold the strategic gateways and certain strategic economic resources such as the Ruhr and Silesia. Since Germany will then be defenseless on the ground and in the air and at sea, moderately sized forces stationed within easy striking distance of Germany would be quite capable of imposing our will upon any German government.

But in addition, standing outside German territory, we could take under control all means of communication between Germany and the outside world—her exports and imports and her external finances, the ingress and egress of Germans, the censorship of mails, telegraph and radio, the movement of ships, railways, and highway transport. Thus Germany's foreign relations would be under allied control

THE ADVANTAGES of substituting external and remote control for occupation and government are many. The most important, I believe, is that it relieves us—the allies—of the direct and visible responsibility for solving the desperate problems which Hitlerism and defeat will bequeath to the German nation.

If we occupy and govern, it will not be long before the Germans, and indeed people everywhere, will begin to hold us rather than Germany accountable for the trouble which Germany will be in. They will forget Hitler and the military defeat. They will be thinking only of us. If, on the other hand, we occupy, and then govern through a free German republic, the free Germans will be our puppets. As puppets they will be tainted. Because they will not easily make Germany prosperous and happy, they will be discredited. Worst of all, we shall merely postpone, without solving, the question of how the Germans are going to learn to govern themselves decently. Is it not better to make the Germans face the German problem at once, in its severest and most direct form, instead of giving them the shelter and protection of an Allied occupation and military government?

IT MAY be said that if we draw an iron circle around Germany, and then compel the Germans to settle the internal problems of Germany, there will be civil war and chaos, the economic recuperation of Europe will be delayed. Maybe so. But does anyone think the Nazi regime can be liquidated, not merely temporarily driven underground, unless the Germans themselves liquidate it? As for chaos, certainly there are good Germans. But will they ever be good enough Germans until they have done what every other free people has done, until they themselves have won their liberties? We can prevent the Germans from destroying our liberties. But German liberty must be won by Germans. Military government merely evades and postpones the issue.

As for the recuperation of Europe, what confidence can any one place in it if Germany's part in it is directed by allied soldiers? Is it not evident that as soon as the occupying forces leave, all of Europe will tremble at what may happen, the whole artificial settlement will be in turmoil ten or 15 years hence.

LAST BUT not least, if we adopt the plan of external rather than of internal control of Germany, we can concentrate our efforts and our resources upon the reconstruction of non-German Europe. This is imperative. The Germans have ruined the economy and are decimating the population of their neighbors. Our first concern should be to see to it that France, Poland, Scandinavia, the Low Countries, central Europe, and the Balkans, are enabled to recover and to become strong before Germany is readmitted as an equal. Otherwise, Germany, though she loses the war, will eventually win the peace.

If we govern Germany directly, we shall inevitably become concerned to govern it well. It is much more important, and it is essential justice, that non-German Europe should be restored before Germany is restored. The method by which we exercise external control of Germany is also the method by which we can most surely see to it that Germany's victims are taken care of first.

Our Isolationist Peace Machinery

THERE IS a dangerous tendency in much of the current thinking about the United States' relationship to the postwar world. That tendency is to oversimplify the problem. Some go so far as to assume that a peaceful future will be assured if the Senate will only pass the Fulbright resolution or a similar declaration of intent to make this country part of a world organization designed to keep aggressors in their place. It is time to realize that something more than good intentions—something more than treaties even—is necessary to make present vague policies meaningful in the postwar era.

PUSEY

Making peace, if it is to stick, is not like taking a dose of medicine or plunging into a cold shower. Those who expect to build up a crescendo of sentiment, make a treaty on the strength of it and then let events take their own course are likely to be sorely disappointed. If we are going to achieve a peace that will be worthy of the name, it will come only through the creation of a sound working relationship among the victorious powers. And toward that goal we have made very meager progress.

The reason for this lag in even discussing the shape of the postwar world are not often candidly acknowledged. We are inclined to say that differences of basic aim between ourselves and the Russians and diverging interests between ourselves and the British stand in the way of postwar collaboration. While that is true so far as it goes, it leaves out one major obstacle to a working relationship among the United Nations—the very obstacle which we ourselves can remove.

THE HURDLE that we are so flagrantly ignoring is what might be called an isolationist system of government. The division of responsibility for our foreign policy between the President and the Senate puts a premium on inaction in this sphere. So it is extremely difficult for the United States to take the initiative in the movement to set up world peace machinery.

Remembering what happened to Woodrow Wilson, the President is reluctant to adopt a bold policy without the consent of the Senate. The Senate is reluctant to put its stamp of approval on a strong international policy that has not yet taken final shape. And other nations are reluctant to rely upon any United States policy that is likely to be torn apart by domestic conflicts between the President and Senate or even between two political parties. Our system is thus geared to isolationism.

For us, then, the first stop toward lasting peace is adjustment of our political machinery so as to make feasible a continuous working relationship among the powers that are winning the victory. In the past it has been impossible, as Ray Stannard Baker pointed out in his volume on Woodrow Wilson, for the United States "to speak with a bold and united voice." This defect in our system "not only disgraces us before the nations," he wrote, "but in some future world crisis may ruin us." That crisis is now at hand. Unless we can devise a way of sustaining one national foreign policy, instead of two conflicting foreign policies, our hope of escaping another bloody conflict is flimsy indeed.

THERE ARE several ways in which such unity can be achieved. One is to give the President dictatorial powers in the field of foreign relations. Most Americans would reject this method in theory, although many seem to favor it in practice by assuming that the Senate should not challenge or interfere with any foreign policy which the President initiates. For some years there has been a tendency to by-pass the Senate by calling treaties with other countries "executive agreements." But that practice is certainly no substitute for a working arrangement between the Senate and the White House on major foreign policy. Strained use of the executive agreement is more likely to produce new friction than agreement if Congress is still to exert an influence upon foreign policy, and if that influence is to be lost, of course, democratic control will go with it.

One other solution that has a good deal of support from the political scientists is replacement of our checks and balances in government by a parliamentary system. Under such a remodeling the executive would be chosen by the legislature and would be answerable to it for all policies, foreign and domestic. Certainly this would be an effective way of eliminating disunity, but only a revolution could so basically alter our system of government after we have used it with a reasonable degree of success for a century and a half.

The remaining alternative is closer ties between the Senate and the President. No one should suppose that founding fathers foisted upon us the unworkable arrangement prevailing today. They directed the President to seek the advice and consent of a Senate of 26 members. Advice could be sought from a body of that size, although it is too large for efficiency; it can scarcely be sought from 96 Senators without a well organized and compact unit to serve as intermediary between the President and Senate.

Here seems to be the most hopeful approach to this critical problem. If we are to have a truly national foreign policy, it must be worked out with the active participation of Senate (and perhaps House) leaders and top men of both parties in the foreign affairs committees. A policy sponsored by any less representative group would be vulnerable to attack from many sources. Of course, it will not be an easy task to evolve a foreign policy by this means. But if we cannot achieve an understanding among the representatives of our own people, what hope is there of attaining a concert among nations strong enough to keep the peace?

40 Bargeloads Of Japs Sunk In Vella Gulf

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Tuesday), Oct. 5.—American warships intent on thwarting the enemy's apparent evacuation of Kolombangara Island, intercepted flotillas of gunboat-escorted barges in the Vella Gulf the night of October 1-2 and destroyed more than 40 of the craft.

One Japanese gunboat also was sent to the bottom under heavy shelling from surface units of Admiral William F. Halsey's South Pacific naval force, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

The action was repeated the following night when further losses were inflicted upon the enemy.

Barges Laden With Troops

Indications were that the barges carried full loads of enemy troops. There was no immediate report on the probable number of soldiers annihilated.

On the night of the first attack, enemy planes attempted to disperse and drive off the American warships, but inflicted only "light casualties on one vessel."

At the other extreme of the Southwest Pacific battle front, Allied ground forces pushing up the Ramu River Valley in northeastern New Guinea were reported to have crossed the Gusap, a tributary flowing into the Ramu near the Allied airfield at Bena Bena in interior New Guinea 90 miles northwest of Lae.

150 Toll of Foe's Boats

Off Buka, at the extreme northern end of the chain, a Navy Catalina bombed and damaged an enemy destroyer and a large transport or cargo ship.

The destruction of 40 barges off Vila brought to nearly 150 the number of such craft sunk or smashed in these waters since the first of September. Previously, however, the sinkings have been the work largely of airplanes and P-T motor torpedo boats.

Vila, developed as an air base in the earlier stages of the Solomons campaign, once was manned by an estimated 10,000 enemy troops, but since American capture of surrounding Munda, Arundel and Lavella Islands, the Japanese position on Kolombangara has become virtually hopeless.

As a result, the Tokyo command is thought to have ordered an evacuation to Choiseul Island, on the north, and from there to Bougainville, the central enemy base in the Solomons.

D. C. Firms Test Absentee Plan

More than 300 employes of the Stone Paper Tube Co., and the Stone Straw Corp., 900-922 Franklin st. ne., have a chance to increase their pay $2.60 every week that they work the full week, under a plan to combat absenteeism approved yesterday by the regional War Labor Board.

Effective as of September 9, the plan gives employes with perfect attendance records for the week a bonus of 5 cents an hour for the first 40 hours and 7½ cents an hour for each additional hour over 40. Workers must put in at least 48 hours a week to become eligible for the bonus.

It was believed that the unique antiabsenteeism plan was one of the first approved by the WLB for this area.

Simultaneously, WLB approved a changed vacation plan for the two companies, and authorized payment of a night-shift bonus of 2½ cents an hour for the 4 p. m. to 12:30 a. m. shift. The vacation and night shift adjustments were made retroactive to January 3 of this year.

A similar plan to pay a War Bond bonus to aircraft workers with perfect attendance records was considered at the recent meeting of the National Aircraft War Production Council at Hotel Statler.

How to walk away from a crackup!

When a flyer had to crash-land a shot-up plane, fire used to be a frequent—and disastrous—result. But now the Kidde Impact Actuator, put into action by the jolt, can automatically shut off the ignition, turn on all fire extinguishing apparatus.

How to shoot a fire dead! Pick up a Kidde Portable Extinguisher, take aim, pull the trigger and kill the fire instantly with carbon dioxide.

Shot from own plane! Enemy bullets hitting oxygen cylinders could send flying metal through plane. Kidde shatterproof cylinders prevent it!

Tanker fires are tough! . . . but not for carbon dioxide. In machinery spaces and pump rooms, Kidde Systems stand guard, ready to smother fire.

Walter Kidde & Company has devoted itself to the science of harnessing gases-under-pressure. War has greatly advanced the scope of this work. New uses are constantly being discovered, which will promote the comfort and safety of the postwar world.

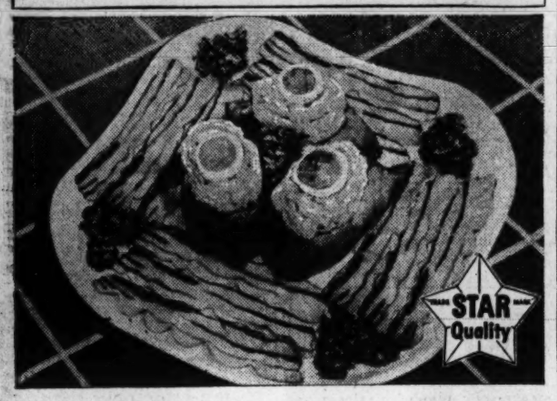
Armour Ideas Make the Most of Meat



Serve Star Bacon and Baked Sweet Potatoes!

Bacon's always been a breakfast favorite . . . but did you know it's a grand meat for dinners, too? For instance, you can make a delicious feast with Bacon and Baked Stuffed Sweet Potatoes! It's a big hearty meat meal for only 1 point a serving!

You allow 2 or 3 strips of Star Bacon for each serving, which figures about ½ pound to 4 persons. We suggest you use Armour's Star Bacon because it's sugar cured in its own juices . . . slow smoked over fragrant hickory and hardwood fires. This gives Star Bacon a rich, mild flavor . . . and spreads the meat-goodness in any Star Bacon dish you make.

Bake sweet potatoes in a 350° F. oven 1 hour or until tender. Cut a slice from top of each, scoop out contents, leaving skin whole. Mash the potatoes and season as usual. Refill skins with mashed potatoes and top each with a half marshmallow. Put back in oven long enough to brown marshmallows. Meanwhile fry the bacon . . . slowly . . . and arrange around potatoes as shown above.

Dirksen Gives Organ Recital

By Ray C. B. Brown

D. C. Chapter American Guild of Organists presents R. Wayne Dirksen in recital on Monday night in All Souls' Unitarian Church. Program of compositions by Purcell, Bach, Karg, Samazeuilh, Bingham and Vierne.

Under the auspices of the American Guild of Organists, District of Columbia Chapter, an enjoyable recital was played last evening in All Souls' Unitarian Church by R. Wayne Dirksen, whose civil title has been changed to Private First Class and whose present assignment is organist and choirmaster of the Post Chapel at Walter Reed Hospital. An accomplished musician with a fine taste in registration and the technical facility to make his voicings effective, he offered a program varied in periods and styles.

BROWN

He began with Henry Purcell, the English genius whose music is known to us only in tantalizing glimpses at his large output. The selections were a joyous Prelude with a typically British lilt in the themes, and a Minuet linked with a Sarabande. The Prelude made a particularly happy use of canon form, and the Minuet was of a pastoral kind to be danced in a meadow far from the formalities of court.

Next in order were two works by Bach, who was 10 years old when Purcell died, the Trio Sonata No. 5 in C minor and the "Wedge" Prelude and Fugue in E minor. The recitalist handled them both with competence both in exposition and tonal coloring.

Turning to the moderns, Mr. Dirksen gave brilliant performances of two chorale-preludes by Sigfrid Karg, who thought to make his name more imposing by changing it to Karg-Elert. One is reminded in a way of a certain Mendelssohn-Bartholdy whose double-barreled cognomen has been generally disregarded. Karg was a consummate master of organ color, but the elaboration in his chorale-preludes are not quite in place, as they distract from the religious mood.

A final group contained a curiously harmonized and imaginative Prelude by Gustave Samazeuilh, the talented pupil of Chausson and d'Indy; a Roulade by the American composer, Seth Bingham, and a dashing Toccata by Louis Vierne.

Holman to Fight For D.C. Autonomy

President who appointed him, for his public acts or for the entire absence of performing any duties in connection with the administration of the District.

"Under that attitude and set-up what would happen to the people of the District should a sudden disaster occur here which at times have visited other cities of our country? A government which is not responsive to the needs of the governed in ordinary times would prove totally helpless and inefficient in an emergency.

"What is obvious at Gallinger Hospital no doubt reflects the common conditions which prevail at other municipal institutions and in the city departments."

He pointed out that Washington's administration is typical of early Colonial days, when government came from above instead of from the people.

"The Commission obviously is not selected for its zeal for the job or for an established reputation of confidence," Holman stated. "We cannot effect a remedy until we find the established authority. Commissioner Mason was selected by the President—God knows why, for he has no municipal experience."

He added that in the entire set-up of the District "there seems to be only a payroll interest in the job."

"I will expect that, with the concurrence of the other members of this committee, we will give the answers which Congress has thus made our responsibility," Lea said.

"We should measure all of the activities of the commission and its personnel from the standpoint of their duty to the Nation as measured by the law under which their duties are defined.

"In other words, a broad public interest is involved in this commission and its activities, and the work of the commission must be measured from that standpoint.

tribute directly or indirectly to offensive action."

President Roosevelt, in a statement commenting on the action, said that the public should not interpret it to mean that the time has come "for demobilization of civilian defense." Civilian defense activities along other lines, he stated, "must be pushed forward with the greatest possible energy."

He also emphasized that "the War Department is assuming the calculated risk of a small-scale air raid" in order "to release some aircraft warning service manpower and facilities to add new and necessary strength to the several American military drives expected to continue against the enemy far into the future."

The civilian manner elements of the Aircraft Warning Service moved from a 24-hour to an 'alert" basis as of 6 p. m., EWT, last night. This means that the volunteer organization will be kept intact for future emergency and that the observation posts and filter centers will operate a few hours one day a week to keep personnel trained and ready for call.

Those affected are the spotters of the Ground Observer Corps and the civilian volunteers of the Aircraft Warning Corps. Civilian volunteers at Army Information Centers will continue their work, though probably in reduced numbers.

All other elements of the Aircraft Warning Service, such as patrol ships and aircraft, radar, etc., operated by military or naval personnel, will continue operations guarding the Nation's coasts against attack.

Eases Communications Burden

Besides releasing the volunteers for other part-time defense work, the action will materially ease the burden on vital communications facilities by discontinuing the round-the-clock phone calls reporting the passage of all planes over observation posts. Some military personnel, as well as vehicles and fuel engaged in supervision of the spotter system, are also released.

350,000 on Eastern Seaboard

A total of 350,000 spotters manning 3814 observation posts and 10,000 volunteers at 19 filter centers make up the civilian warning service along the Eastern Seaboard, and are affected.

Over the country approximately 18,900,000 man-hours have been devoted to this work each week by the spotters alone. Many of the spotters are housewives, elderly persons or people holding full-time jobs who may find it difficult to fit into other war programs. The move, however, is expected to relieve the manpower situation to a material extent.

Partners with Industry!

The railroads of America are backing industry to the limit in the war of production. Only the close coordination born of a common cause could result in the extraordinary achievements of transportation and industry since the war began.

For many years the Seaboard Railway has recognized the interdependence of industry and transportation. On the established principle that the welfare of the railroad depends upon the prosperity of its patrons, the Seaboard has been working over a long period of time for the economic development of the territory it serves.

The Seaboard's interest extends beyond the location of new plants. It is equally concerned with the success of all industry served by its Line. Its policy is to provide adequate service and to adjust the freight rates on raw materials and finished products to enable these industries to compete with similar industries whether located in the South or elsewhere.

Remarkable progress has been made in the industrial development of the South in recent years. Present indications point to further expansion in the post-war period.

Seaboard will work in the future—as in the past—as Partners With Industry.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP).—All grains were under pressure today, selling being based mainly on reports that the Commodity Credit Corp. was asking the Argentine government for quotations on wheat and barley for importing into the United States.

Trade was less active than last week, but heavier than prior to suspension of activity at Winnipeg. At the close wheat was ⅝ to ⅞ lower, December 1.50⅛@1.50, May 1.50⅝@1.50¾; oats were off ⅜ to ⅝, December 75⅝, and rye was down ¾ to 1 cent, December 1.07½@1.07⅝.

Wheat and barley would be imported from Argentina to the United States, if the CCC is successful in obtaining it, to relieve the tight feed situation, grain men said. There were unconfirmed reports that some grain already had been purchased for distribution in New England and the Southeast.

Pepco's Net Mounts 10% In 8 Months

The Potomac Electric Power Co. yesterday reported earnings of $2,772,382 in the first eight months this year, an increase of $252,131, or approximately 10 per cent over the same 1942 period.

Operating revenues aggregated $15,034,045, a gain of 9.8 per cent or $1,346,893 over last year. Operating expenses were up 14 per cent or $891,012, while depreciating expenses advanced $30,962 and taxes were 9 per cent heavier.

September net income was $285,976, a decline of $68,070, or 19 per cent compared with the corresponding 1942 month. Operating revenues for the month were $1,934,649, or 13 per cent heavier, but operating expenses increased 23 per cent. Depreciation showed a small increase, while taxes were estimated $12,761 less than in the same 1942 period.

Dewey Sees No Need for Tire Crisis

Rubber Director Bradley Dewey indicated yesterday that rubber-tire manufacturing companies would have to share responsibility for any breakdown in essential transportation growing out of a shortage of tires.

Replying to statements attributed to heads of five Akron, Ohio, rubber companies that shortages of fabric and manpower were hampering production of tires, making immediate and drastic tire-conservation measures necessary, Dewey said:

"It is very heartening to note that leaders of Akron tire manufacturing companies are worried and that they recognize their responsibilities."

Steps already under way, Dewey said, along with "management's expressed realization of its responsibilities, together with care of tires on the part of the public, there need be no breakdown of essential transportation."

It was understood that the imposition of the West Coast type of manpower controls is contemplated for Akron, which is short approximately 8,000 to 10,000 workers needed by rubber and aircraft plants.

"In addition to securing for them an adequate supply of synthetic rubber," Dewey said, "we have taken steps to provide them more rayon and cotton tire cord, and other important items essential to the manufacture of tires and other rubber products.

"Arrangements have also been made by which their company-owned textile mills will be taken off the manufacture of products other than tire cords.

"They are being helped with their manpower problems, and they are being urged to take advantage of all possible priorities available to them regardless of effect on less-important business. Steps have been takent to facilitate the procuring for them of new milling and other tire manufacturing facilities, and the companies are being urged to get their projects engineered and under way as soon as possible.

In addition, Mr. Jeffers, before he resigned as rubber director, also took steps to bring together tire-building labor and managements, and obtained from labor a pledge to make existing equipment more productive."

Guaranty Trust Assets, Deposits Set New Record

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Resources, deposits and holdings of Government bonds of the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York were at a new high on September 30, the condition statement of the bank disclosed today.

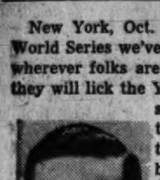
Chandler vs. Lanier as Series Opens Today

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, Oct. 4.—Even before it starts, this is the strangest World Series we've ever encountered. On the street, in the hotels, wherever folks are gathered, the talk is of the Cardinals and how they will lick the Yankees. For the Yanks, there is an overtone of slight contempt. But against the impression that the Yankees would have a nerve even to show up tomorrow, the odds-market is unwavering. The betting men will still give you 13-to-10 odds that the Cardinals won't win.



POVICH

That means there is more talk in support of the Cardinals than money. No big dough has shown for the Cardinals, and the driblets haven't been sufficient, apparently, to affect the price which the bookies would readily change at the first sign of any stampede toward the Cardinals or any lack of Yankee betting. After all, the odds are governed by the extent of the public's willingness to bet.

The enthusiasm for the Cardinals this year is not the home-town, yokel enthusiasm that accompanies a pennant winner. It has permeated New York as well, and is heard among astute baseball men who have no sectional sympathies. The suspicion is that this is the worst Yankee team, if not the worst American League team that ever succeeded in getting into a World Series.

Yet, there are the odds, favoring the Yankees, 13 to 10. It all sounds very incredible against the weight of popular liking for the Cardinals, but it is assumed that the gents who lay the odds are no dopes. There is Yankee money around, and apparently it is riding heavily on one name in the series—Spurgeon (Spud) Chandler.

Chandler is the guy who represents what Yankee backers are betting on, a fellow who, if pushed, could bring the Yankees three of the four victories necessary to win the series. They're going down the line on the premise that the Cardinals aren't going to beat Chandler, ever.

He's the old Georgia University halfback who is the closest thing to an unbeatable pitcher in baseball. He just ended the regular season by winning 20 games and losing only four. Any time the Yankees get two runs for him, he figures to win. Sometimes he needs only one run. He has an earned run average of only 1.71 per game. He throws everything—fast ball, curve ball, fork ball. He has control. In the game he lost to the Cardinals last year in the series, he allowed only three hits.

Chandler's stature in the preseries picture was suddenly increased ten days ago when the announcement of the series schedule revealed that it was possible for him to make three starts. He could pitch the opening game, and take advantage of a new, two-day hiatus between the third and fourth games and pitch the fourth. There is, too, a provision for a day's rest between the sixth and seventh games, which would permit Chandler to be back in there if a seventh were necessary.

It's impossible to knock Chandler down, as the series most important personality at this time, but he can be sniped at. For one thing he didn't have much to beat in the American League. He wasn't pitching against a team that could hit as well or run as well as the Cardinals. Against the Cards, he's apt to find the going tougher. They outhit any team in the American League.

The Cards are a better run-making team than the Yankees. They have three guys who form a wonderful spearhead with their ability to get on base. Second Baseman Lou Klein and Outfielders Stan Musial and Harry Walker, the top men in the batting order, can hit, bunt or beat out infield taps. Then the Cardinals are able to wheel up their heavy-duty boys, Walker Cooper, Whitey Kurowski and Danny Litwhiler, who have been driving in the runs all summer.

If there is a psychological edge, it belongs to the Cardinals. They ran the Yankees ragged last year in the series and beat them at every turn, running the bases, hitting the ball, pitching and throwing. They ran the bases last year despite Joe DiMaggio's throwing arm in center field. His good throws couldn't stop 'em. This year, without DiMaggio, the Yankees must play Roy Weatherly, Tuck Stainback or Johnny Lindell in center. The Cards may like that.

Against the Cards' apparent superiority, there is the strong habit of assuming the Yankees are always the best team in World Series. They've been licked only twice in their last 12 series. This year, they are conceded to have a pitching edge with such as Chandler, Bonham, Borowy and Russo ready to throw at the Cardinals. Baseball men always presume that pitching decides a World Series.

But it wasn't pitching that won last year's series for the Cardinals. It was a lot of other items, highlighted by base running and the throwing of the Cardinal outfielders, and their hitting all down the line. They still have it. Their pitching needs only to get Charley Keller and Bill Dickey out. The others in the Yankee batting order, excepting perhaps Bill Johnson, haven't scared American League pitching this year. Buck Newsom has been saying all season that "the Yanks are the easiest club in the league to pitch to."

We don't think the Cardinals will need super pitching. In the face of the odds, we like the Cardinals, in five games, maybe.

Lefthander is Choice Of Southworth; Yanks Favored; Game Sellout

69,000 Awaiting Baseball Eyeful; Scalpers Getting $25 for Tickets; New York in Final Stadium Drill

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 4.—Comes tomorrow, the World Series as usual, even in a world at war—America's insistence on its bit of October Americana, and presenting the Yankees as 13-to-10 favorites to beat the Cardinals.

For tomorrow's opening game that will send a sellout crowd in excess of 69,000 stampeding into Yankee Stadium, the Yankees will send Pitcher Spud Chandler against their conquerors in the 1942 series, but the Cardinals have made a pitching change.

Not Morton Cooper, the Cardinals' 21-game winner this season, but left-handed Max Lanier is Manager Billy Southworth's pitching choice against Chandler. That was Southworth's announcement on the arrival of the Cardinals in this teeming town tonight.

Cooper Jinx Removed

Thus, for the opening day at least, Southworth has disposed of the Cooper jinx which has seen him beaten in all four of his starts against an American League club. Cooper has been complaining of a sore arm, although, he adds, "I can't remember when my arm wasn't always sore after pitching a game."

The Yankees are 7½-to-5 favorites to win the opening game, a tribute to the potentialities of Chandler, their 20-game winner who lost only four games during the regular season. Lanier, though, will be pitching to the Yankees' weakness—their left-handed batbatting order.

You couldn't buy a ticket to the series in New York tonight without patronizing the scalpers. A single box seat for tomorrow's game is bringing $25 over the counters of the speculators. Twenty thousand bleacher seats will go on sale tomorrow morning with a sell-out certain, what with long queues already bivouacked outside the bleacher gates.

No Batting Practice

The Cardinals were forced to forego any batting practice today, being confined to their train from St. Louis, but they arrived tonight as a happy, confident gang, bent on repeating their decisive defeat of the Yankees in the 1942 series.

The Yankees spent most of the afternoon in their own stadium, in an attempt to sharpen their batting eyes for the series. In anticipation of the pitching of the left-handed Lanier, Manager Joe McCarthy had Southpaw Tommy Byrne on the mound during the drill. In contrast to Yankee practice barrages of previous years, only one homer dropped into the stands today—that by First Baseman Nick Etten.

Despite the odds favoring the Yankees, the Cardinals have the popular support, and are rated the same kind of a ball club that ran the Yankees ragged on the bases last year, besides outhitting them. There have been some changes made on the Cardinals, but Southworth does not believe they have altered the type of his club.

Cards Have Power

In contrast to previous years when the Yankees annually went into the series as the power club, the Cardinals now qualify for that label with Bill Dickey the only Yankee hitting more than .300. The Cardinals boast the big gun in Stan Musial, the .357 hitter who was the only man in the majors to make more than 200 hits this season. He made 220.

The Cardinals will be bringing to bear also, the hitting of clean-up man, Walker Cooper, who has been hitting .319 and was the most feared man in the National League with men on bases. Terry Moore and Enos Slaughter are in military service, but the Cards have come up with two other dangerous-hitting outfielders in Harry Walker and Danny Litwhiler, the latter a home-run threat.

In place of the smart, heady veteran, Jimmy Brown, at second base, the Cardinals have rookie Lou Klein, a harder hitter than Brown, and like the other Cardinals, willing to run. Vernon Sanders, a

Jeffra Easy Victor Over Cockfield

Baltimorean Wins Every Round, Bids For Wilson Bout; Fight No Contest

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

If you can imagine how close it would be if the Chicago Bears played Central High School, thats how close it was last night at Turner's Arena as Harry Jeffra punched out a ridiculously easy 10 round victory over Johnny Cockfield, former New York Negro now fighting out of Washington.

Jeffra, 130½, former bantam and featherweight champion from Baltimore had as much trouble with Cockfield, who weighed 128, as Jack Dempsey would have with one of the Dead End Kids.

Jeffra kept a snaky left in "Jumpin'" Johnny's face all night, layed back with a vicious right uppercut that whistled into Cockfield's stomach or face every time he kept coming in, or was making Johnny miss as much as the guy who kept getting two bells and a lemon on the slot machines.

Wins Every Round

Promised a possible bout with Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson if he won impressively, Harry won every round by a margin so wide it was difficult to compute. He danced around Johnny as if Cockfield was tied to a post and kept going at full speed for the entire ten rounds, proving he is in as fine condition as he ever was.

He simply blinded Cockfield with speed and leather. To put it briefly, it was no contest, and nobody got hurt or even bled.

Tee Hubert, 161½, Washington, ran up his seventh straight local victory by easily decisioning Stoney Lewis, 164½, also of Washington in the eight-round semifinal. Hubert dumped Stoney to the canvas in the fifth with a hard left hook to the face.

It was a listless affair until the seventh, when Lewis briefly stopped his backpeddling tactics and elected to slug it out with Hubert. Tee, reveling in this sort of thing, was punching Stoney around pretty good in the final two minutes of the seventh and all of the eighth to take a unanimous decision.

A crowd of 1483 customers dropped a gross gate of $1361 into the Joe Turner cash drawer.

Wright Winner

B. B. Wright, 146½, a colorful character from Pittsburgh, scored a technical kayo over George Williams, 152, Baltimore in 2:52 of the third round. B. B. simply carried too many guns for the Baltimorean.

Aaron Perry, 141, Washington, needed only one punch to make Mario Gentile, 138, Baltimore, extremely gentle, putting Mario to sleep in the ultra-fast time of 24 seconds of the first round.

Other bouts saw Harry Diduck, 134, New York, outpoint Don Baccala, 134, Baltimore, in a six, and Wayman Stewart, 130, Washington, start his comeback by kayoing Johnny Casta, Baltimore, in 2:47 of the first in what was to have been a six.

Yanks' Etten, Cards' Litwhiler Series' "Cinderella Cuties"

Year Makes Difference

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 4.—The "Cinderella cuties" of the World Series are Nick Etten, first baseman for the Yankees, and Danny Litwhiler, outfielder for the Cardinals.

A year ago the two were teammates on the Phillies who finished a woeful last in the National League. Now they are regulars on two championship clubs with a nice nestegg coming to them through the World Series. Etten was traded to the Yanks last winter while Litwhiler went to the Cards in June.

Litwhiler was on the train en route from St. Louis, while Etten went through batting and fielding practice at the stadium. The former Baltimore slugger, who batted in 108 runs for the Yanks during the season, belted one into the right field stands while taking his practice swings. "What a difference from the Phils," he beamed.

Gordon Roberts of Baltimore was the first fan in line to buy a bleacher seat, but the guy who was actually there first was the reporter assigned to cover the arrival of the first bleacherite.

Billy Evans, president of the Southern Association, wouldn't pick either the Yanks or Cards. "I've no selection, he aserted. "The clubs are too evenly matched, in my opinion."

Ziggy Sears was slated to be one of the National League umpires in the series with a chance to call decisions involving his son, Catcher Ken Sears of the Yanks, but illness knocked him out of the assignment.

Spud Chandler, who will start against Southpaw Max Lanier, wound up his workout by posing with "King Kong" Charley Keller, then running around the field.

Stasica, Lapka Impressive In Redskin-Sailor Scrimmage

The Redskins moved into Griffith Stadium for their daily workouts yesterday with newcomers Leo Stasica and Ted Lapka due for added consideration for playing roles against the Brooklyn Dodgers Sunday after impressive showings against Bainbridge Naval Training Station in last Saturday's scrimmage.

Stasica, who handled Sammy Baugh's role as the latter was in Texas for a visit with his wife and new-born son Saturday, and Lapka, end purchased from the Chicago Cardinals, came out of the scrimmage with excellent showings to their credit.

The Redskins outscored the Sailors, two touchdowns to one, but Baugh, Willie Wilkin, Ray Hare and Joe Aguirre did not play and other regulars were used sparingly, Andy Farkas and Wilbur Moore scoring in brief appearances. The Sailors scored against the 'Skins' third-string line on a short pass play.

Wilkin will undergo another examination today to determine his chance of playing in the Redskins' belated league opener at Griffith Stadium with the twice-beaten Dodgers. The big tackle's leg was hurt in the Navy scrimmage three weeks ago and has been in a cast.

Coach Dutch Bergman has scheduled early morning scrimmages as most of the squad members have located afternoon jobs in firms, colleges, etc., connected with the war effort. The 28 players broke camp Saturday and by the end of the week will have established personal living quarters for the remainder of the season.

The 'Skins will start defensive workouts today against Dodger plays which have not produced a point for first-year coach Pete Cawthorn in two league games to date against the Detroit Lions and Phil-Pitt Steagles.

Bergman and Line Coach Turk Edwards watched the Dodgers and Steagles play Saturday night in Philadelphia and Dutch still believes in the potentialities of the Dodger outfit. They have several good backs and a good first line, according to Dutch. They were stopped on the five and seven yard lines by the Eagles and missed a score when a pass was dropped in the end zone on what should have been an easy catch.

Two or three night sessions for movies, scout reports, lectures, etc., will be held each week, with one scheduled tonight in a downtown hotel, in order to make up for Bergman's lack of time to work with the squad due to their jobs. —M. W. W.

Mrs. Lynch Wins Medal, Shooting 86

Mrs. Charles Lynch, defending champion in the Women's Club title play at Washington Golf and Country Club, won medal honors with strokes to spare yesterday as Washington was the only club to carry out what was originally scheduled as "Women's Club Championship Week."

Mrs. Lynch posted a creditable 86, despite a high wind and a two-stroke penalty on the seventeenth. First-round matches are scheduled in the championship and secondary flights today.

The status of other women's club championship tournaments:

Western and Eastern Play 'Spot' Game

The spot game of this weekend in the public high school series will be Western vs. Eastern, Dallas Shirley, director of physical education, announced yesterday. The contest will be staged on Saturday at Central Stadium, starting at 3 o'clock. Shirley booked the clash an hour later than last week's Anacostia-Roosevelt game in deference to requests of adult spectators.

Two other games are booked in the series. On Friday afternoon, Central visits Roosevelt and Tech performs at Wilson.

Ruffin Jolts Beau Jack; Hanbury Wins

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 4.—Chalking up one of the outstanding ring upsets in Madison Square Garden history, long-shot Bobby Ruffin outpointed ex-Lightweight Champion Beau Jack in ten bruising rounds tonight before a World Series-eve crowd that nearly filled the huge Eighth Avenue Arena. Ruffin scaled 135½; Jack, 140½.

A 9-to-1 underdog and so lightly rated that he was put on tonight's card as a tune-up for Jack's November 19 lightweight title tussle with Bob Montgomery, Ruffin outboxed the Jumping Jack from Georgia most of the way and piled up points with jabs and counterpunches.

The local youngster, a Long Islander now although a native of Bridgeport, Conn., wound up with a badly gashed left eye, but he knew too many ring tricks for the wild-swinging Beau.

Lew Hanbury, the carrot-topped lightweight walloper, Manager Al Weill brought out of Washington recently, pounded out a clear-cut decision over Frankie Rubino of Brooklyn in the six-round semi-windup. Hanbury scaled 135¾ to Rubino's 133½.

Columbus Wins In 'Little' Series

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 4 (AP).—Columbus (AA) won its second straight little World Series game from Syracuse (IL) tonight, 5-2, before 5396 fans, exploding for 11 hits off three hurlers, as Southpaw Erwin (Preacher) Roe doled six blows to the Chiefs.

Don Scott, Ex-Ohio State Star Athlete, Dies in Crash

By International News Service

London, Oct. 4.—Headquarters of the United States European theater of operations announced today that Lieut. Don Scott of the Eighth Air Force, former Ohio State University football star, was killed in a plane crash on October 1.

The crash occurred near Scott's British base and was due to bad weather, which closed in after the take-off.

Two others who lost their lives with Scott were Second Lieut. Ramsey J. Toon, 23, of 6997 Fulton st., San Diego, Calif., copilot, and Master Sergt. James B. Sutton, 24, of Silver Creek, Miss., line chief, who was acting as test engineer.

Scott, who had been on nine missions, became commander of a squadron of Marauder medium bombers September 22 and had led his squadron on one mission as its commanding officer.

Col. Carl L. Storrie of San Antonio, Tex., station commander, paid tribute to Scott.

"Much was expected of this outstanding officer," he said. "It will be difficult to replace him."

Scott was married shortly before he left the United States

Maryland U. Football Squad Loses Three Regular Players

Jacobsen, McCarthy, Fico Leave

Navy Transfers Tackle; 2 Ends Inducted by Army; Blow to Terps

University of Maryland received a triple body grid blow yesterday when the armed services claimed three of their first string performers, Ends Pat McCarthy and Ralph Fico and Tackle "Jake" Jacobsen.

Fico, a 190-pound end of great defensive and forward pass catching ability, was taken into the Army via induction. McCarthy, a star last Saturday, has been ordered to report to the Army October 13. Jacobsen, who starred at tackle and guard in both of Maryland's games with the 'Curtis Bay Coast Guard Cutters and Wake Forest, was transferred by the Navy to another school. A student in the V-12 program, Jacobsen's destination is not yet known, but it is believed he will be sent either to the University of Pensylvania or Princeton.

Played as Regulars

McCarthy and Fico have been two of three ends Coach Dr. Clarence W. Spears has seen fit to play in the Old Liners' two games. Ed Hurson, former Gonzago ace, is the other. Spears must now develop a pair of reserves from five wingmen, none of whom have had much previous experience in Bob Hafer, Gil Tausher, Jim Lutz, Bob Malersperger and Hal Brubaker, the latter only on the squad for less than a week after his discharge from the Army.

Jacobsen's departure leaves only Wilbur Rock, former Central High lad, Larry Cooper and Mike Zetts among the tackles who have seen action this year. Only two other tackles are on the roster in Joe Mollyday and Earl McFadden.

The squad, at a meeting yesterday, voted Pat McCarthy as the outstanding player in Saturday's last-second 13-7 triumph over Wake Forest, and elected the former St. John's star to represent the school at the Touchdown Club luncheon today.

Barnett Invites Wood, Sam Byrd To Pro-Senior

Chevy Chase Pro Bob Barnett has invited Craig Wood, the holdover National Open champion, Sammy Byrd, All-American Open winner, Leo Diegel, Joe Kirkwood and other outstanding pros to compete in the anual senior-pro tournament October 14 at Chevy Chase.

All local professionals are invited to compete along with a number from the Baltimore and Philadelphia sections. All prizes will be in War Bonds.

Ben Hogan played in the event last year and won both the main event with his senior partner and the pro sweepstakes over the outstanding field in the history of the tournament.

Bloodworth Gets Induction Notice

Detroit, Oct. 4 (AP).—Jimmy Bloodworth, Detroit Tiger second baseman, received an induction notice today from his draft board at Appalachacola, Fla. He is married and the father of a son born since Pearl Harbor. Bloodworth is a former Washington National infielder.

Bloodworth planned to leave for Florida tonight by air.

Racing's Elite Gathering for Pimlico Meet

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 4.—With between 500 and 600 thoroughbreds already on the grounds and others arriving almost hourly, officials of the Maryland Victory Race meeting predicted today that upward of 1700 racers would be on hand for the rich 30-day season.

More than 500 racers were quartered in the Pimlico barns today, with others at Laurel, and a spokesman for Pimlico—where the four major Maryland track's consolidated meeting will be conducted—predicted that the old hilltop layout would be filled to its 1,200-horse capacity by Friday.

The meeting will open Saturday, featured by the reneweal of the $7500 Capitol Handicap, a six-furlong test for 3-year-olds and upward. The Capitol is a transplanted Laurel Park feature.

Among the arrivals at the Hayward ave. course today was Calumet Farm's Pensive, the son of Hyperion which was favored in the wagering on Saturday's Belmont Futurity, won by John Marsch's Occupy. Although the Warren Wright colt wound up fourth behind Occupy, Rodney Stone and Platter, he closed much ground in the late stages and stamped himself as one of the likely choices for Maryland's juvenile classics.

He will carry the Calumet silks in the Pimlico Futurity, the richest race of the coming 30-day meeting, in which he may meet such sparkling 2-year-olds as Occupy, Boojiana, the filly which finished fifth in the Belmont Futurity, Alorter and others.

Lanier Faces Chandler as Series Opens

Yanks Homer Threats

The home run wallop in the series, however, may belong to the Yankees, who have accumulated more than 100 homers for the 19th year in a row, and can present Charley Keller, Nick Etten, Bill Dickey and Joe Gordon as four-base threats.

The Cardinals' home-run hitters are Musial, Sanders, Litwhiler and Kurkowski, who haven't walloped homers in any great profusion, but have averaged a dozen. Kurowski hit the homer that beat Ruffing in the seventh and final game last season, a line drive blow into the left field stands.

Against left-handed pitching, the Yankees have announced a line-up in which Etten and Keller are the only left-handed hitters, but the Yankees' batting order is conspicuous for the absence of power guys such as Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich.

In an attempt to combat the base-running tactics of the Cardinals, a horrible memory of last year for the Yankees, Manager Joe McCarthy has installed Johnny Lindell in center field. Lindell, a reformed pitcher, has the Yankees' strongest throwing arm, but it falls far short of the accuracy of Joe DiMaggio's, who couldn't stop the Cardinals in the last series.

Navy, Duke to Meet Before 63,000 Fans

Unbeaten Teams Ready for Baltimore Stadium Encounter; Game a Tossup

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 4.—Navy and Duke, two of the Nation's "hottest" undefeated football teams, are ready to take off the wraps and shoot the works in Baltimore Stadium Saturday night to show 63,000 fans just what each has been hiding—if anything—beneath its first five teams.

When contracts were signed for a three-game series between the Middies and Blue Devils, no one knew that the first meeting of the clubs since 1930 would produce a gridiron natural before a 63,000 sellout crowd, at the rate tickets were going today.

Actually, it appears a toss-up and take your choice, in the first real test for well-fortified Navy and for the Durham dynamiters, losers to the sailors in three of four previous meetings.

Navy in Good Shape

Capt. John E. (Billick) Whelchel, Navy mentor, reports his potent squad in top shape after its easy 46-7 triumph over Cornell, but he doesn't know how the middies will react when real heat is turned on.

In blasting the North Carolina Pre-Flight Cloudbusters, 31-0, and again in the Cornell walk, Navy's first-stringers saw a total of exactly 29 minutes and 5 seconds of play. Whelchel even used his second string sparingly in the Cornell battle with his third and fourth elevens bearing the brunt.

Duke has mowed down three opponents without taking a deep breath, the Blue Devils' V-12 inoculated powerhouse rolling up 143 points in shutting out the Camp Lejeune Marines, Richmond University and the N. C. Pre-Flight Cloudbusters.

Defensive Edge

Duke won, 42 to 0, over the Cloudbusters, 11 points more than Navy, but Coach Eddie Cameron used the Devils' best bets most of the way. Navy's first string played only 13 minutes 20 seconds by comparison.

Likewise, the Middies had the best of it defensively, allowing the Preflighters no closer than the midfield stripe whereas the Cloudbusters dug into Duke territory time and again and even rushed over one score that was called back.

Whatever the answer, it will come up Saturday night, because neither team will leave Baltimore Stadium without exploding well-preserved tricks.

Middies Unhurt, Working for Duke

Annapolis, Oct. 4 (AP).—No injuries were reported on the Navy team today as a result of the Tars' 46-7 shellacking of a determined, but ineffective, Cornell football squad Saturday in Baltimore.

Due to what was termed by one Middie coach "a lack of work in the Cornell game," the Navy pigskin mentor, Coach John E. (Billick) Whelchel sent the first and second teams through a short but fast scrimmage this afternoon at the Naval Academy.

Heavy practice is on the card for every day this week as the Navy prepares for their first strong test of the 1943 season against the victory-marching Duke University "Blue Devils" next Saturday at Baltimore Municipal Stadium.

Long to Wrestle LaChappelle in Arena Feature

Maurice LaChappelle, popular French grappler, and Johnny Long, Baltimore shipyard worker, were booked yesterday for a 30-minute match on tomorrow night's wrestling card at Turner's Arena, featuring Babe Sharkey and Cowboy Luttrell, the two villains.

Also closed out yesterday was a 30-minute match between Dr. John Bonika, the Boston medico, and John Melas, of Florida.

Dapper Dizz, a newcomer from the Coast, will oppose Michele Leone, the Boston villain, in the semiwindup, while The Blue Streak, a hooded grappler, will take on Ed (Strangler) White, former pro football player.

The Sharkey-Luttrell match is a return one. Some weeks ago Sharkey won by disqualification.

Whiskey prices in Washington

There is a nation-wide shortage of whiskey.

The whiskey now on hand is in no sense a "reserve."

Whiskey is aged for years before it is bottled and marketed and the present supply was intended for sale in '43, '44, '45, '46 and later. And now this supply must be stretched through 1947 and 1948 . . . because distilleries are now making only alcohol for war.

That's why there isn't enough whiskey available to meet the public demand.

Yet since our plants stopped distilling whiskey last year there has been no change in the official prices of Hiram Walker brands except for the new federal excise tax in 1942 and the OPA adjustments in 1943.

The official OPA prices in this city are as follows:

Canadian Club
Blended Canadian Whiskey
90.4 proof. 6 years old
$4.50 4/5 QUART $2.83 PINT
OFFICIAL OPA PRICES

Signet
Bottled in Bond
Rye Whiskey. 100 proof
$3.27 4/5 QUART $2.07 PINT

Blended whiskey, 86 proof
The straight whiskies in this product are 4 years or more old. 30% straight whiskey—70% grain neutral spirits
$2.75 4/5 QUART $1.57 PINT
OFFICIAL OPA PRICES

There will be times when your dealer cannot furnish the brand you request. But in fairness to him, please be patient and remember that the whiskey shortage is real . . . due to the war work of the distilleries.

LOOK AT THE VICTORY GARDEN NOW

THIS looks like a glimpse of the county fair. Or the family raiding the pantry.

But it isn't. It's just Mom, Dad and the youngsters getting a big kick out of the results of the canning they did last August.

This food means more than food ever meant before. They grew it together. They picked it together. They packed it together. They all have a stake in it.

Dad well remembers how he peeled peaches until 1:30 one morning—so they'd be canned before they softened. Sis thought there'd be no end to the cartons of jars she sterilized. Bud lugged stuff in by the bushel. While Mom did the cooking and the processing.

Such a picture would have been strange a few years back. Then the family was rarely together. Each one kept scurrying off to his own interests.

But now they've been drawn close by the necessities of war. They are planning together, working together and having a good time together.

And this is good.

For the family is the fundamental social unit. It is a strong unit that can turn wishes into achievements. It is the unit whose enterprise and self-reliance made America the strong nation she is today.

So the returning emphasis upon the family working as a unit is evidence of America's resurging strength.

LOOK magazine claims no mystic powers of having foreseen this rebirth of the family. For years it has been our purpose to provide a magazine which every member of the family would enjoy.

We undertook to know thoroughly family interests and to understand each member's problems. Then we set out to make LOOK a magazine that everyone would find interesting, informative and inspiring.

We believe we have succeeded in our purpose. For today 2 million of America's wide-awake, capable families buy LOOK regularly.

Lilacs in Bloom

Denton, Md., Oct. 4 (A.P.)—The flowers that bloom in the spring bloomed here today in the fall. White and purple lilacs, whose buds were destroyed by a late spring frost, wre reported to be in belated full bloom.

Swinging Lesson

Spokane, Wash.—Louis Robinson, 41, traveling salesman, pleaded guilty, but paid only a $5 fine after this explanation:

"I saw two guys roughing up a soldier, so I stepped in and started swinging. How did I know they were detectives?"

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

War Manpower Board For Decentralization

War Manpower Commission is to be decentralized. Yesterday the President asked Congress to appropriate $17,000,000 with which to do the job. The plan largely on paper, proposes: (1) that state WMC offices be located in every state and that the present regional offices e gional offices be reduced in authority and personel. About 25 state offices already have been established. (2) that area offices be strengthened to implement the 48-hour work week, to see that business exempted from the 48-hour week are checked, and to make sure that luxury services in hotels, laundries and the like are discontinued.

KLUTTZ

Job utilization and manpower priority features of the West Coast labor plan will be extended to other critical labor areas. Moreover, it's planned to build up local U. S. Employment Service offices. In critical areas, the local offices will be charged with doing a better job of placement, and they'll be responsible for recruiting more employes in surplus labor areas. About 1200 new employes would be added in State and area offices and hundreds more in local offices. Two hundred employes would be transferred from the regional offices and a few people from Washington would b moved to the field.

ARMY STORE: A sergeant and a private were court-martialed for kicking a colonel in the backside as he was entering an auto. The sergeant, asked for an explanation, said the colonel had stepped on his very sensitive corn; that he lost control over his reflexes, and he kicked the colonel unintentionally. The board was impressed by the story. The private who had run from a nearby building to boot the colonel, was then called on to explain: "I've got no excuse," he admitted, "Hell, I thought the was was over!"

Selective Service definitely will announce a plan this week which will defer all pre-Pearl Harbor fathers in the Federal service except those in nondeferable jobs. The order will have the effect of placing the Government on an equal footing with workers in other essential industries. Selective Service is agreed to the principle of deferring fathers in the Federal service, but it can't make up its collective mind on how it's to be done. Two different plans have been presented to top officials for a decision, and when the choice is made the order will go out to the 6500 local boards. One plan calls for leaving fathers in draft class 3-A. However, thousands of fathers already have been reclassified to 1-A and an alternate plan proposes that the Government's deferment committee automatically approve the deferment of fathers.

A committee made up of Treasury, General Accounting Office and Budget Bureau officials are working on plans to overhaul the vast and cumbersome payroll sections throughout the Government. And it's about time. The jobs of thousands of workers and millions of dollars could be saved if the work were modernized. While the committee is searching for a solution it should take a look at the payroll section in War Department's Office of the Chief of Transportation. This office has 13 employes and it gives the 1800 transportation employes top service.

This is one of the few Federal offices where employes get a detailed slip each payday which shows them how their pay is computed. The exact amounts of retirement, bond deductions, overtime and withholding taxes are listed with gross and net salaries. Every single Federal worker should get similar service. Those who get a flat amount with no explanation can never be sure the checks are correct. This work in the transportation office is done by a machine. In a single operationo, it makes five payroll copies, posts a complete record of earnings and deductions on the employes' record, and produces the printed statement. And the machine can also write paychecks in the same operation.

That picture of General Marshall on the front cover of several magazines has the Army worried. Study how the general is saluting, his hand is out, British fashion. The American Army has been warned not to do the very thing the No. 1 Army man is pictured doing . . . Civil Service is prepared to push for the employment of handicapped workers. In a booklet out today, "Untapped Manpower," the commission points out that 13,000 physically handicapped persons have been appointed to the Government between October, 1942 and July, 1943. Examples of blind and cripples performing excellent work are cited . . . Terasury's American Legion Post will install these officers tonight: George Sloane, commander; Smith Bradford and Joseph Dowall, vice commanders and other officers are George Cameron, Peter Massian, T. V. Walker, Francis Callahan, and William Slattery. The Government Employes Group Association will hold its dance Saturday night in the National Press Club Auditorium. Rudy Vallee Helps Boost Bond Total

The District's war bond total, already past the 94 million-dollar quota, was boosted last night by approximately 368 million dollars as film fans bought the securities to see special shows at the Earle and Capitol Theaters.

Among the entertainers were Lieut. Rudy Vallee, directing the Lucky 'Leventh Coast Guard Band, and Victor Mature, former motion picture star, now boatswain's mate first class in the Coast Guard.

Also appearing were Boatswain's Mate Second Class Melvin Baldwin and Coxswain Raymond F. O'Malley, the only two survivors of the Coast Guard cutter Escanaba which was torpedoed several months ago in the North Atlantic. Sole admission to the show was by purchase of a $100 war bond.

Home-front fighters were urged meanwhile not to rest on laurels won in passing the quota set for Washington in the Third War Loan drive.

"Need for unprecedented bond sales here still exists," declared John A. Reilly, chairman of the District War Finance Committee, asserting that "purchases by individuals in the Nation's Capital and throughout the country have not reach the goals set."

Final tally of Washington's Third War Loan is expected to be made known by October 18.

Meantime it was announced that the rubber division of OPA had won a bond sales contest against a field of 22 other OPA divisions, by going 500 per cent over its quota.

Paul M. Green, director of the accounting division, which sponsored the contest, will present the award at a banquet Friday night at the Wardman Park Hotel. The trophy was donated by Richard Morris, publicity director of the accounting division.

Other news of the bond drive:

1. Iota Gamma Phi Sorority rally Sunday night netted $30,000 in sales.

2. Fred G. Holderman, war bond chairman of the local Life Underwriters Association, announced that through Septe ber 30 the group had accounted for sales of $509,750.

3. Czechoslovak diplomatic and consular officials and employes of the Czechoslovak Information Service have purchased $10,450 in series E bonds, according to Karrel Cervenka, Charge d'Affaires of the Czechoslovak Embassy.

Nationally nearly half a billion dollars in additional purchases sent the total last night to $17,384,000,000 as a Treasury recapitulation showed 10 new States—29 in all—over their quotas. Reports will continue to be tabulated through October 16.

Vallee Strives To See Family Of Fiancee

Bond selling and Coast Guard business rate priorities, so Lieut. Rudy Vallee today is still trying to find time to meet the family of fiance, Bettejane Greer, who last year swapped Washington modeling for Hollywood pictures.

Flanked by 35 members of his Lucky 'Leventh Coast Guard Band, Vallee arrived in Washington yesterday for a two-day stint which includes entertaining at the "Stars at Midnight" war bond shows in the Earle and Capitol theaters last night, numerous radio broadcasts, a possible camp show or two and interviews with officials at local Coast Guard headquarters.

Then he plans to relax on his first furlough since he took over the Coast Guard Band more than a year ago. The band, incidentally, has been lifting morale in hospitals and service camps all over the country and has raised some 75 millions for the bond drive.

And somewhere in between he plans to meet Mrs. Elizabeth B. Allen, Bettejane's grandmother, and her uncle, Jawne Allen, a portrait painter . . . possibly this afternoon. On the other hand, he had hoped to bring Bettejane back East with him to meet his family in New York, but the 19-year-old singer was busy with her new career.

News of the couple's engagement was given out by Vallee last August, when he said wedding plans would be deferred for the duration. But yesterday he admitted the date might be set earlier.

Col. James G. Hall Named Head of Air Reconnaissance

Col. James G. Hall, who in private life is a member of the New York Stock Exchange, is the new chief of the reconnaissance branch of the air staff.

Announcement of his appointment was made yesterday by the War Department, which said Hall recently returned from overseas where he commanded a photo reconnaissance and mapping group with the Eighth Air Force in England.

Four District Bills Reported Favorably

Four bills were reported favorably and 18 others were either deferred indefinitely or held for public hearings yesterday by the judiciary subcommittee of the House District Committee.

The so-called "dop-napper" measure, designed to protect dogs from theft or deliberate poisoning, was among the four approved. It provides a maximum fine of $50 or 30 days' imprisonment, or both, for a person who harbors a dog other than his own for more than 48 hours without furnishing the District poundmaster with its description and license tag number, if any.

Another proviso of the bill, described by Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois as "applying the hit-and-run principle to dogs," is a maximum fine of $100 or 90 days in prison, or both, for any person who strikes a dog with a motor vehicle or otherwise, and who thereupon fails to render immediate assistance to such dog and within two hours to furnish a police officer . . . with the name and address of such person."

Other measures approved by the subcommittee and referred to the full committee for further action would:

Make present legislation penalizing persons driving under the influence of alcohol or leaving the scene of an accident applicable to streetcar operators and bicycle riders;

Require licensing of all weapons carried, whether concealed or unconcealed;

Allow the Commissioners to establish parking lots on property owned by the District prior to enactment of the Parking Facility Act of February, 1942.

Action was deferred on two bills affecting United Nations officers stationed here, one of allowing them to import liquor into Washington and the other granting liquor licenses to their clubs. A third alcoholic beverage measure would restore complete prohibition in the District.

Parking Rules Changed in Northwest

In a routine meeting of the Board of Commissioners, held yesterday in the District Building, the Commissioners discussed budgetary considerations, approved formal contracts and traffic law changes.

Traditionally these sessions are closed to the public except in cases where special hearings have been requested.

Sand and gravel contracts aggregating more than $30,000 were awarded the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. These materials will be used by various District departments for building and street construction.

The part of the session devoted to hearings on the 1945 budget, recently submitted by the various departments, was attended by Budget Director Walter C. Fowler and his chief assistant, James Wilding.

Several changes in parking regulations were approved by the Commissioners after being recommended by W. A. Van Duzer, traffic director. The changes were all made in the Northwest section and were as follows:

From Florida ave. to Euclid st., no parking on the west side at anytime except Sunday from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m.; from Kalorama rd. south, a distance of 150 feet on the east side, no parking at any time; from Euclid st. to Cllumbia rd. on the east side, no parking at any time; from Columbia rd. to Euclid st. on the west side, one hour parking between 8 a. m. and 7 p. m. except where otherwise indicated by official signs; from Connecticut ave. east to the driveway leading into the parking lot alongside the E. V. Brown School, on the south side, no parking at any time.

At their meeting tomorrow the Commissioners will hear the appeals of nine restaurant owners who were recently penalized by the License Board for violations of the District's sanitary code.

WACS Hope To Enlist 350 D. C. Women

Plans for a determined recruiting drive to enlist 350 Washington women in the All-States Division of the Women's Army Corps were mapped yesterday after a "mess luncheon" of the campaign executive committee at Fort Myer WAC barracks.

The Nation-wide drive for 70,000 additional WACs was launched last Monday and will go on until December 7.

According to Lieut. Helen K. Cooper officer in charge of recruiting, a huge WAC recruiting ball is being planned for October 20 at the Shoreham Hotel.

Lieutenant Cooper also said 75 newly recruited District WACS are expected to leave October 22 with the special Washington flag and will meet contingents of the 48 States at the basic training center to form the All-States Division. Every State group will carry its own flag.

Harry S. Wender and Dr. E. F. Harris, on behalf of the Federation of Citizens Associations and Civic Associations, pledged full support of the drive through their affiliates.

The meeting was under the chairmanship of Mrs. James Clement Dunn. Vice Chairman of the executive committee is Capt. H. C. Whitehurst and secretary is George E. Keneipp.

Among the more than 50 guests were Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis, commandant of the Washington military district, Judge Fay L. Bentley, and Col. Charles W. Kutz, engineer commissioner.

City News In Brief

Trapped under earth and wooden braces when a sewer ditch caved in yesterday, Gino Ventresco, 30, of 405 G st. ne., received a possible fractured spine.

He was working at Mellon and LeBaum sts. se., when one of the wooden shoring supports broke. The heavy timber fell across his back, pinned him down, and he was partially was buried.

Fellow workmen rescued him and he was taken to Casualty Hospital. His condition was said to be undetermined.

Cast Visits White House

John Golden, the producer, and 83 members of the soldier cast of "Army Play by Play" were guests yesterday at a reception in the White House. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, presided in the absence of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

Man Falls Off Trellis

Peter K. Bean, 47, of 1314 N st. nw., suffered a possible fractured pelvis yesterday when he fell off a 12-foot trellis while working at the Columbia School of Drafting, 1239 Vermont ave. nw. He was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Manor Park Citizens Hold Anniversary

H. S. Bryant, Charter Member of Group, Recalls Changes During 20 Years

Twenty years ago a rural district dotted with farms—today—a flourishing metropolitan area.

That is the history of Manor Park as outlined by Herbert S. Bryant, one of the charter members of the Manor Park Citizens Association, at a meeting in honor of the twentieth anniversary of the association last night in the Whittier School, 5th and Sheridan sts. nw.

Bryant traced the growth of the organization and its consequent place in fostering the development of the community. Among the public improvements secured in part by the association's efforts, he said, are the Whittier School, Paul Junior High School, Calvin Coolidge Senior High School, public swimming pool, 20-acre recreational center, Fort Slocum Park and many other developments.

Other speakers included John D. Smoot, a former president, who reminded the members that further improvement is sought, such as the enlarging of the present storm sewers; John C. Breck, deputy zone raid warden, and Miss Elsie E. Green, principal of the Whittier School.

In addition to Bryant, four other original members were present. They were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest H. Pullman, B. B. Allison and Mr. Smoot. James T. Scott is present head of the organization.

Dupont Circle

Harry S. Wender, president of the District of Federation of Citizens Associations, expressed the opinion last night that critical conditions now under investigation at Gallinger Hospital should not be blamed on District Commissioners. He spoke at a meeting of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association at the Mayflower Hotel.

"More than 100 investigations have been made since the Civil War in District institutions but recommendations have never been followed up," Wender declared. He added that health is "purchasable" if money is spent wisely in building hospitals, health centers and proper recreation centers.

Referring to Washington's rising population, Wender predicted that the District would reach two million within the next few years. "Before the first World War ended, there were predictions that Washington would be practically evacuated after the war was over," he recalled. "Instead, new people came in to replace those who went home."

Progressive Citizens

Walter Branhall was reelected president of the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown last night. Other officers elected were:

Miss Etta Taggart, reelected honorary president; Mrs. Joseph L. Goodman, first vice president; Henry W. Draper, second vice president; Mrs. Lawrence Martin, third vice president; Miss Ann Keliher, recording secretary; Mrs. Virginia Gaffney, corresponding secretary; Miss Edna Ladson, treasurer and Mrs. Elizabeth T. Sullivan and Mrs. Elizabeth Draper, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Association.

On motion of Mrs. George Becker the association adopted a resolution asking for stricter enforcement of the laws against juvenile delinquency.

Metropolis View

Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell, president of the Metropolis View Citizens Association, last night announced at the association meeting that a new Metropolitan Police Boys Club, known as Club 12, would be opened at the McKinley pool field house, Lincoln rd. and Randolph pl.

They also voted to support the club for which the area had been working for a number of years.

B. G. Gardiner, Revenue Employe, Dies in New Haven

Bowlen G. Gardiner, 46, tax consultant with the Internal Revenue, died yesterday in New Haven, Conn. He has been a resident of the District for 30 years. Prior to entering the Internal Revenue Service about a year ago he maintained offices in the Woodward Building for about 10 years.

He represented the United Hotel Corporation of America and many other nationally known corporations in tax matters before entering the Federal service. He was well known in Catholic circles for his many charities. Mr. Gardiner married Miss Cecelia Sullivan of Washington, in 1915. In addition to his wife, he is survived by four children, Mrs. Mary Sullivan, Miss Marguerite Gardiner and Bernard J. Gardiner of Washington and Mrs. Helen Woods of Jacksonville, Fla.

His body on arrival today will be removed to the Pumphrey funeral home, Bethesda, Md.

Trial Division of District Court Gets Its First Woman Clerk

Marcellina Hummer, Graduate of Iowa University, Gets Post

Miss Marcellina Hummer, 24, of 514 19th st. nw., is the first woman ever to be regularly assigned to a trial division of District Court, Col. Charles E. Stewart, clerk of the court, announced yesterday.

Miss Hummer, who holds the degree of juris doctor from the University of Iowa, is a native of Washington. For several weeks she has been learning the routine of her new position.

In other divisions of the court, women have been clerks. Miss Eleanor Jobe has been clerk of Motions Court since 1940.

Truck Kills Baby Who Ran Into Street

D. C. traffic deaths this year . 63
Deaths this date last year .. 79
District total last year 108

A 2-year-old boy was killed by a truck yesterday, two elderly pedestrians were seriously injured, and a woman suffered broken ribs in a taxi-bus collision.

Victim of the fatal accident was Empie Washington Shaw, Negro of 1326 6th st. nw. He was crushed under a truck at 6th and O sts. nw., when he broke from his mother's hand and ran into the street.

Police reported the truck was operated by George E. Jackson, Negro, 24, of 1019 2d st. sw. He drove past another truck on the right hand side and struck the boy as he darted from behind the first truck, it was said.

Jackson was taken into custody and will appear at a coroner's inquest, it was said.

Maude Hall, Negro, 46, of 1547 4th st. nw. was treated at Emergency Hospital for two broken ribs following the bus-taxicab accident at 39th and McKinley sts. nw. She was a passenger in the bus.

According to witnesses the bus, driven by Sie Lurye, 28, of 4200 Military rd. nw, was traveling east on McKinley st. and struck the cab going south on 39th. The latter was operated by Harry Steinberg, 36, of 1333 Belmont st. nw.

Samuel Freedman, 70, of 1220 Shepherd st. nw., was admitted to Walter Reed Hospital for treatment for a compound fractured right leg and severe cuts after being knocked down by an automobile at Georgia ave. and Upshur st. nw. His condition was considered critical.

The second pedestrian was Charles Bridges, 79, of 218 C st. nw. who was struck by a street car at 9th and F sts. nw. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where doctors said he suffered a broken right hip.

Last of Four Drunks Gets Biggest Fine

The scene is District of Columbia Court yesterday with Judge Thomas D. Quinn presiding:

First Drunk: Where does the cop come off also charging me with disorderly conduct? I admit I was drunk but while waiting for the wagon, he hurt my left arm, and he got sore when I asked him to please hold me by the right arm.

Judge Quinn: $15 or 15 days.

Second Drunk: We had the bottle all right, and we were going to take it home. But we were afraid we might break it so we drank it on the street. And what should happen but an officer passes by.

Judge Quinn: $5 or 5 days.

Third Drunk: I'm sorry, judge, but I can't help liking the combination of wine and beer and I know I can't take it.

Judge Quinn: $10 or $10 days.

Fourth Drunk: I plead guilty. That's all.

But his frankness was more than matched by a long record of convictions. "Twenty-five dollars or 25 days," said the judge.

Federal Employes' Council Sees Cost Of Living Rising

Disclaiming recent statements by Government officials that living costs have been checked and, in some instances, brought down, members of the national executive council of the National Federation of Federal Employes yesterday stated that their experience in all parts of the country has shown "that the situation today has become deplorable, alarming, and a definite threat to the war effort."

Here for an executive session, the council members have decided to concentrate their "concerted attention on the entire problem," it was said.

Council spokesmen said that "Federal employes in every part of the country are finding the gap between income and outgo becoming increasingly wide" and that they were in unanimous agreement "that in their communities living costs not only are much higher than they were even a year ago but, further, they are continuing to go up from month to month."

Victory Sidelights

Judge Neilson Warns Speeders He Will Impose Heavier Fines

Those found guilty of speeding will face heavier penalties than they have ben receiving, Judge George D. Neilson in Municipal Court announced yesterday.

The judge said: "Speeders will be impressed with the seriousness of their offense in wartime and the only solution in most of these cases appears to be heavier fines. That is just what they will get."

William Richmond, 336 Emerson st. nw., was fined $35 on a charge of driving at an "unreasonable speed." Mary Grogan, 3428 Ashley Terrace nw., was fined $30 after police charged her with driving at 50 miles per hour.

D. C. Slum Clearance

John Ihdler, administrator of the National Capital Housing Authority, will appear at 10 a. m. today at a Senate District subcommittee hearing on a resolution introduced yesterday by Chairman McCarran for investigation of slum clearance on NCHA property.

Suggested byIhdler, the measure was presented "with a view to recommending a sound program for meeting needs of the Capital, both during the present emergency and in the postwar period, and for financing the program."

Discussion on Taxes

Four Congressmen will discuss the 1944 Tax Program tonight on Theodore Granik's American Forum of the Air. The broadcast from the Shoreham Hotel over Mutual Station WOL is from 8 to 9 p. m.

Three members of the House Ways and Means Committee on the program will be Representatives Carlson (Republican) of Kansas, Wasielewski (Democrat) of Wisconsin, Dewey (Republican) of Illinois. Representative Voorhis (Democrat) of California, author of Out of Debt, Out of Danger, will be the fourth member of the group.

Senator Capper to Talk

Senator Capper will address a joint meeting of the Connecticut Avenue Civilian Defense Committee and the area's Citizens Association Thursday at All Saints Church at 8 p. m., it was announced yesterday by Harry Grove, civilian defense chairman and president of the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association.

At the same time the appointment of C. H. Pope, president of the Munsey Trust Co. to the Civilian Defense Committee to fill the vacancy created by the death of Fenton R. Leith, was announced.

Laundry Price Rise Approved

16 Concerns Get OPA Sanction; Must Increase Workers' Pay

Sixteen District laundries received official notification yesterday from Regional Office of Price Administration headquarters in New York permitting price increases ranging from 2 to 10 per cent. Applications for price boosts were denied to four laundries.

All laundries which decide to raise prices to customers must institute wage raises recently approved by the War Manpower Commission, a spokesman for the laundries said last night. The percentage increases granted the 16 laundries were lower than those sought in a petition filed by the Laundry and Dry Cleaners Association with OPA. Several laundries received as much as 66 per cent less than the requested increases.

May Boost Bundle Sizes

The OPA ruled that all 20 laundries may increase their present minimum bundle sizes, thereby reducing expense related to small amounts of laundry. This provision will cut delivery costs and operating expenses.

Those laundries granted percentage increases follow: Banner, Alexandria, Va., 10 per cent; Bell, 4706 Leland st., Chevy Chase, Md., 2 per cent; Blue Ribbon, 4712 Hampden Lane, Bethesda, Md., 10 per cent; Carroll's, 14th and R sts. se. 9 per cent; Colonial, Alexandria, Va., 10 per cent; Conger's, 23rd and C sts. nw., 10 per cent; Dupont, 2535 Sherman ave. nw., 6 per cent; Elite, 2117 14th nw., 5 per cent; Franklin, 508 13th st. nw., 6 per cent; Home, 1101 Raum st. ne., 2 per cent; Manhatan, 1330 Florida ave. nw., 5 per cent; Mayfair, Silver Spring, Md., 10 per cent; Morningside, Silver Spring, 3 per cent; Page, 620 E st. nw., 10 per cent.

Quality and Service, Bladensburg, Md., 4 per cent; Tolman, 5248 Wisconsin ave. nw., 9 per cent; and West End, 1723 Pensylvania ave. nw., 5 per cent.

Apply to District Users

In the case of Virginia laundries, the price increases apply only to customers who live in the District. The raise is effective as of October 1 but each customer must be furnished a 15-day advance notice describing services and specifying new permitted minimums. The wage increases must accompany price raises.

Laundries denied the price increase include: Arcade Sunshine, Bergmann's, Old Colony, and Yale. A spokesman said last night that these laundries may appeal the decision to the Director of Services Division of OPA.

The percentage increases shall be applied only to the total amount of the bill rendered to each customer. Such increases may not be applied to individual items of service and existing price lists shall not be altered.

For those bundles below the minimum weight, the minimum weight price may be charged. The additional pounds between present and increased minimum shall be charged at the present coverage rate per pound and not at the basic rate or average rate per pound.

For example, if the present price for damp wash is 15 pounds for 75 cents and 4 cents each additional pound, the increased minimum price would be 20 pounds for 95 cents and 4 cents each additional pound.

Mrs. N. R. Robinson Of Silver Spring, Dies in So. Carolina

Mrs. Lois Garwood Willis Robinson, 65, of Silver Spring, Md., and wife of Noah R. Robinson, real estate operator and builder, died yesterday of a heart attack while visiting relatives in Darlington, S. C.

A victim of an automobile accident in Washington several months ago, Mrs. Robinson had been in ill health since then.

Born in Cape Hatteras, N. C., Mrs. Robinson came to Washington in 1909. An active member of the National City Christian Church, she recently attended the Columbia Heights Christian Church.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Robinson leaves a son, Charles T. Robinson of the Montgomery County Police Force, and a daughter, Mrs. Nina May O'Neil, both of Silver Spring, Md.; three brothers, Thomas G. Willis, Silver Spring; Rube Willis, Poplar Branch, N. C., and Mace Willis, Manteo, N. C.; a sister, Mrs. R. V. Johnson, Norfolk, Va., and three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. The Rev. Harry L. Bell, pastor of Columbia Heights Christian Church, will conduct the service. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

These Women!

By d'Alessio

"Isn't it nice to see the various branches of the armed forces getting along together so well?"

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

If people become too indifferent and slothful in accepting responsibilities of citizenship our freedom will end and our Government be destroyed. This is the warning of Representative Dewey Short of Missouri, guest speaker at the opening meeting of the D. C. League of Republican Women yesterday.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"In time of war there is a tendency to let someone else rule," he said, "rather than ruling ourselves." He backed up his statement with the following quotation from Thomas Jefferson:

"The natural progress of things is for liberty to yield and government to gain ground. Respectable people are sometimes responsible for our bad government, because of their lack of interest and apathy in matters pertaining to our government."

Stressing the fact that Congress has cooperated 100 per cent by granting the administration everything, Representative Short declared that partisanship never for one single minute has been shown since our entry into the war.

The immediate task ahead is to win the war, according to the speaker, who pointed out that we have more to do than just winning the war.

"When we fight and win that does not mean that we can impose our political philosophy or system of government on others," he explained. "Imposition implies coercion. Freedom must be fought for and won by every man, and it cannot be enjoyed unless the individual has a capacity for its enjoyment."

To further emphasize his point, Representative Short again quoted Jefferson: "The right of self-government does not comprehend the government of others."

"Centralized powers in bureaus has threatened our democracy," declared the speaker. "Bureaucrats are appointed and not elected. Therefore, they are not responsible to the will of the people as are the elected representatives in Congress. Government should come from the people and not be thrust upon them. Government should be the servant and not the master of men.

"Long continued possession of individual power will lead to one-man rule," he continued. "Jefferson recognized this danger when he said in a letter to General Washington in 1788, 'I dislike strongly in the new Constitution the perpetual reeligibility of the President. This I fear will make an office for life first and then heredity. However, I shall hope that before there is danger of this change taking place in the office of the President, the good-sense and free spirit of our countrymen will make the change necessary to prevent it.'"

Preceding Representative Short's speech, short talks were given by Mrs. Virginia White Speel, honorary president of the League of Republican Women; Mrs. Franklin Farrington, vice chairman of the speakers bureau of the Red Cross and Mrs. George Hyman of the OPA.

Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann, president of the league, presided and introduced the speakers. A board meeting was held prior to the general session in the afternoon.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife, 27, Wed 7 Years, With Sixth Child Soon To Be Born, Is Mentally Tortured by Knowledge Of Husband's Serious Philandering; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: There seems to be no solution to my problem, but your judgment is so sound, and your advice so constructive, that I hope you can help me. It seems that I am married to the philandering type of husband. I am 27 and he is 29. We have been married seven years and have five children, with a sixth expected soon. My husband is very successful in the insurance business,—which affords him limitless excuses for going out in the evenings and returning in the wee small hours with evidence (such as lipstick on his shirts, and a compact I found in his coat pocket before sending the suit to the cleaner's), that he has been out entertaining (or has been entertained by) other women. Needless to say, he denies such conduct, and gives other explanations for his late hours.

Shortly after our third child was born, several incidents occurred to indicate he was "cheating." However, he changed suddenly and became as attentive to me as before; and I decided that perhaps I had misjudged him; that nothing more than a mild flirtation had occurred. And really I had no reason to believe more than that. But now that I am about to bear my sixth child, and am in need of as much tranquillity of mind as possible,—particularly since maid help is so difficult to obtain, which leaves me too much work to do,—the old worry has come up again, in a more vicious form. Again my husband stays out late at nights, always with an unconvincing excuse; and I have definitely learned that he is interested in a particular woman and spends considerable time with her.

He Stays Out All Night And Goes Away Weekends

In fact, he is so engrossed with her that when I stated I was tired of his behavior, he intimated that he probably could get someone else to take over my job,—meaning the care of his home and children. As to that, I know better, of course. I love my children and my home; but even for me it is hard work; and it is difficult to believe any strange woman would want to take over such a task. Recently, he took a trip to a nearby town, allegedly on business; but I have since learned that the man for whom he was supposed to be transacting the business, knew nothing whatever of this trip. Now, he is contemplating leaving me alone again for another weekend,—which of course gives me real cause for worry, as I am to be confined any day now.

In the past, my husband has been generous and cares for his children. But recently he has been making some very nasty remarks to me, which indicate that he would like me to leave him, so that he could divorce me on grounds of desertion. He is nice looking, generous and sympathetic in manner, which of course attracts people to him. And though I have such a large family, I am considered attractive and look younger than my years. My home is well kept, and I spend as much time as possible in sewing and making house furnishings. And I am a good cook. This is mentioned merely to point out that my huband has no cause for complaint so far as housekeeping goes; and indeed he has none on any other score, as I enjoy the things he does,—such as dancing, the movies, etc. And in spite of the mental torment I have suffered for weeks, I have refrained from nagging him. But I must have this matter settled.

What is there to do, Miss Haworth? Would it be better for him to leave, with the understanding that he is to provide for his family? Right now, when he should be home with me in the evenings, I am left alone with five small children; and often he does not return until early morning. Please give me some suggestions as quickly as possible. DISTRACTED.

Only Superhuman Woman Could Bear Such Burden

DEAR DISTRACTED: This presentation of your problem is so finely worded, so indicative of poised and disciplined intelligence; and, also, of such almost-superhuman strength of body and character on the part of a woman who could bear six children in seven years, to a roue husband, while worriedly aware of his "weakness for women," and keep up her looks and morale while doing so,—in addition to daily dispatching a load of housework that would sap the energies of perhaps six Amazons,—that I am tempted to doubt the truth of the story. It seems almost unbelievable that a woman in every way so superior as the one portrayed,—both on and between the lines of the narrative,—would ever have let such a set of circumstances develop, to overwhelm her at last. But since "Truth is stranger than fiction,"—a proverb oft proved in the counsellor's experience,—I shall put aside doubt and proceed on the assumption that the letter is sincere.

To begin, my impulse on reading your letter is to regret (as I daresay most readers will) that society has not retained the pillory, i. e., a wooden contraption mounted in the town square, consisting of a frame having holes through which the head and hands of the offender were thrust,—as a means of publicly reprimanding and chastising such a culprit as your husband. His sensual abuse of you is indecent, inexcusable, shocking,—in carelessly begetting by you so many children in so few years, while at the same time being unfaithful to you, and progressively brazen about it; and now, in rudely indicating that he would like you to vamoose, making way for a successor, leaving him in possession of his home and his brood. I feel that you should have this estimate of his behavior,—an estimate in which all objective-minded persons will concur. I am sure,—to give you courage in firmly charging him with an intolerable, despicable performance; and in clearly demanding an immediate, absolute end to it,—OR ELSE. And tell him the "else" will be a hellish turn of events, brought on by him, in which his six nursery-age children will become shock-ravaged, innocent victims of HIS gross passions and selfishness.

After Child Is Born, Put Your Cards on Table

In the circumstances, it seems to me most advisable to wait until the sixth child is here, and you have fully recovered from the accouchement,—which might be six weeks to three months from now,—before getting your cards on the table with your husband. Which means: Letting him know, as clearly as well-chosen words can say (1) that you are not (and have not been for months) in the least deceived by his night-owl alibis; (2) that you are convinced (without caring to argue the matter) that he has a mistress; (3) that if he means what he hints (and you are prepared to believe that he thinks he does), he thinks he is tired of you now, and wants you to leave, and thus put yourself on the spot as having made the first move to break up the home; and you get the point; BUT (4) while a clean-up campaign is certainly due, and overdue, responsibility for launching it rests with him, and he must face the fact that failure on his part to act RIGHTLY, henceforth, means that he will be guilty of the unspeakable crime of making pitiful refugees of his children, or otherwise critically damaging their lives; because (5) while you are NOT going to "get out" and leave the home and the children to him, you ARE serving notice that unless he settles down to dependable behavior and decent hours and civil treatment of you (and stress the three stipulations), you hereinafter refuse to be a wife to him, as a matter of personal principle, although, in loyalty to the children, you propose to remain just where you are; and (6) therefore, it is up to him to decide whether the situation is to get better, by his reforming. Or whether it is to get worse, due either to his deserting the lot of you, or to his trying to stay on, bully-fashion, in the house, as though your attitude didn't matter, while cold hate of each other takes possession of both of you. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Ration Your Temper for The Duration

By Grace Martin
Associated Press Features Writer

Have you thought about rationing some of your bad habits in wartime?

You might begin by choking off worry about the war every time it crops up. Worry reflects itself in a strained face, a muddled mind—and indigestion. You can do without all of those right now. And the members of your family will be happier if they don't have to put up with their effects on you too. So ration your worries, or get along without them altogether. They accomplish nothing anyway.

You can probably cut down on your temper with profit, too. The sharp words you speak in anger have a way of ringing in the air long after they are spoken. They echo in your own mind and distract you from work you should do. They stick in the memory of the other fellow and keep him from cooperating with you as he should, whether he is your brother or the telephone operator who gave you a wrong number. So all that a fit of anger does is to muddle progress, both in yourself and the other fellow.

Wouldn't it be a good idea to ration your temper so thoroughly that it is virtually out of circulation for the duration?

A BRACE OF JERSEY BLOUSES

By Ruth Gregory

What'll it be? A blouse to go with a dressmaker suit? A blouse for evening wear? Whatever it is, you'll find it in wool jersey.

Jersey, as we've said before, has become one of the most popular fabrics with designers—particularly, blouse designers. They've draped it and shaped it into some of the most interesting blouses we've seen in a long time.

Take these blouses sketched . . . run your eye over them and note what divers wonders have been worked with necklines: the crew-neck sweater look, the dainty drawstring, the fetching self-ruffles, the ruffly bow, that star-pointed collar.

These are just a few of the beautiful jerseys (wool and rayon mixed in about equal proportion) you'll find in the stores right now. Later there'll be even more—low-necked jeweled ones for evening wear, for instance, will be in town in a few weeks. The blouses sketched here range from around $6 (the drawstring and the ruffle neck) to around $13 (the piquant pointed collar). And most of these are available in several colors.

You can wear these with tailored suits, with dressmaker suits, or with a skirt alone. That black sweater-looking blouse, for one, would look very handsome, and complete unto itself, with a black jersey skirt, brighted with a hunk of shoulder jewelry.

We like wool jersey. It's soft and stays fresh-looking, it does things for a figure, and it'll keep you warm.

Beauty for Airline Hostesses

By Margaret George

"Go to the mirror each morning and say 'I'm beautiful'" . . .

That's where we came in. Eight young girls dressed in blue were eagerly listening to the bits of advice being offered by a beauty consultant from one of Washington's well-known salons.

The girls, who hail from Milwaukee, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Erie and Washington, are in the third week of their "basic training" course. In another three weeks, if they pass all their courses, including radio, first aid, meterology, etc., they'll become "winged goddesses." (That's what the beauty consultant told them they were.)

Giving them courses in beauty culture is a new idea for this particular company, and if the truth be told, some of the officials would prefer the girls not so beautiful. As it is, they're losing girls all the time because they are attractive, to begin with (one of the requirements)—they meet their man, and the airlines have to find another hostess.

The morning we were there the girls were learning about hair care—a thoroughly informative and interesting lecture. And we made some notes for your benefit.

Those strange-looking hieroglyphics on the blackboard, for instance, aren't just idle doodling. They explain the structure of the hair, graphically describe the little follicles, or hair roots, which must be properly nourished in order to provide you with a luxuriant crop of hair.

Or maybe "pelt" would be a better word for it. At least, that's the way this hair specialist talked about it. 'Compare your hair with a fur which you wear 24 hours a day. She went on to talk about the importance of your general health as a basis for a shining, healthy head of hair. If your hair is lank and lifeless, its' a pretty good indication that your system's out of whack somewhere—could even be foot trouble.

She showed them how to brush their hair—up and out from the scalp—to stimulate circulation. This house—and almost every beautician in the country, is quite insistent upon proper brushing. She showed them lotions for dry scalps and oily scalps, explained about shampooing.

The products which she showed the girls aren't limited to Washington, nor are they new to the cosmetic world. They're known nationally and have been tried and tested for the last 40 years. That's one reason this particular house was invited to demonstrate for the girls.

A few more lectures like this one, and the gloomy official outlook on the danger inherent in these beauty courses—from a personnel turnover standpoint—will certainly be justified.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

You may work so hard trying to relax that you get more tense. So, let your jaw sag, your head loll forward until your chin is resting on your chest, and your shoulders droop forward. Then with every exhalation of the breath, say "let go" for 10 counts.

No, that isn't an exercise in how to look silly. It is part of a five-minute practice in relaxation intended to save you from wasting hours of the day in silly worry, fretting, fuming, or the unnecessary expenditure of energy. The lesson in "letting go" is just one of the many valuable suggestions made by Dr. David Harold Fink, neuropsychiatrist, in his new book, "Release from Nervous Tension."

Cutting down on nervous tension, the doctor goes on, helps us get the upper hand of our emotional habits. That little exercise in relaxation is worth doing. After the 10 times of letting go as you breathe out, you should be relaxed through the shoulders. Then try to let the muscles of the face go limp.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Unless a parent's working hours are geared to early rising, the child's habit of waking at 5 to 6 a. m. is anything but appreciated. Oh, for an hour's extra sleep, thinks the harassed housekeeper, as she gets up foggy-eyed to attend to the wide-eyed baby.

No doubt these habits are a left-over of that period when the baby's schedule began at 6 a. m. with a bottle of warm milk. Despite his growth and his later bedtime hours he still wakes up at the crack of dawn.

The mother's attempt to help baby sleep longer takes the very dubious course of keeping him up longer at night. But, as she soon discovers, this does very little except to make the baby crosser both night and daytime and does not influence his daytime waking one whit.

We take it for granted that the child we are discussing is past one year of age, has been weaned from the bottle and should be having his first meal around 7 to 7:30, if he will only wait for it. He could sleep an extra hour, if he would, and it is this aim the parent is furthering.

One way to manage this is to help the baby to wait for an hour for breakfast. If he does and gets into the habit of eating his first meal around 7 o'clock, the mother will find that in time he will not be waking until around that hour. The stomach is always an excellent alarm clock.

This is not a suggestion to let the baby cry until the parents can stand it no longer, it is to keep him comfortable and happy and push the breakfast meal forward little by little until it is near the 7 a. m. mark.

To do this, change the baby, put on bathrobe and slippers so he is warm, straighten his bed, give him some soft, padded animal to play with and a couple of crackers to eat. It is the latter which will help him end the yawning vacancy of his tummy and forget that breakfast ought to be appearing. Then while he eats and plays the parent may get a couple more winks of sleep and still have breakfast for baby by 7 o'clock.

Almost any child from 1 to 3 would be more contented if given this early morning snack and a later morning awakening would be encouraged.

Our leaflet, "Hours of Sleep," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, in care of this newspaper.

THE GENTLER SEX

How to Be Smart on Nothing a Week

(Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, noted reformer, has as guest columnist today Miss LaJeanne de Spain, expert on chic, penthouse decoration, vegetable arrangements, hors d'oeuvre making, war work coordinating, etc. Mrs. DeGoofey is at present occupied with postwar planning activities relative to the forthcoming Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin conference.

By Miss LaJeanne de Spain

Today I want to discuss a momentous problem affecting the womanhood of our Nation's Capital. It is: How may we all become more soignee?

MISS DE SPAIN

There has recently been widespread criticism of the dress and grooming of Washington's women and girls. They are accused of lacking that smart, up to the minute, fashion plate look that is so necessary to public morale in wartime. Women, for the sake of our brave boys on the far flung fighting fronts, we must do something about this!

Now it is a very simple matter for any of us to achieve smartness. It is not a matter of money. The business girl, for example, needs only a simple, basic duration wardrobe, including one good basic suit and several smart basic blouses, one outstanding basic top coat, one basic fur coat, a couple of beautifully simple basic wool dresses, one basic afternoon dress (simple, but possessing interesting detail) one well cut, basic, ageless, double duty, dinner and evening dress, and several changes of basic hats, shoes, gloves, bags, etc., to give variety and surprise to these basic outfits.

I might add that the career girl—also the housewife—should shop carefully and cleverly, refusing to accept anything that is not definitely en rapport with her personality.

Evening Gown From Hubby's Suit

Now as a patriotic gesture any woman will want to augment this simple wardrobe with what she already possesses. Remember, it is smart to wear old clothes now—provided they are brought up to date. If you have a perfectly good last year's suit in your closet don't throw it away merely because the jacket happens to be more than the 25-inch length maximum allowed under Order L-85. Get a GOOD tailor to shorten it for you.

If you are especially thrifty you may want to make yourself something new out of one of your husband's discarded suits. Here is how: Rip it up and cut away the frayed cuffs and trouser bottoms, the ragged elbows, shiny seat and that part of the coat top that has become worn from rubbing against the collar. Faggot together the remaining scraps to make yourself a stunning top coat or embroider them with sequins to make an evening gown. Remember the patched effect is very smart this season.

However, clothes alone don't make the woman. In fact you may wear almost anything and retain that smart wartime look if you are always exquisitely groomed — coiffure trim and crisply flattering above your simple tailored suit; make up carefully chosen and painstakingly applied to give you that fresh satin skin appearance, hands beautifully kept and perfectly manicured, skins and eyes reflecting that vitality that comes from frequent body massage and facials and a liberal intake of drug store vitamins.

Keep Up With The Latest People

Take long, leisurely baths using perfumed bath salts (the more expensive kinds) liberally. Frequently run away from it all and spend a weekend in the country. Stimulate your mind by reading the latest books, seeing the latest shows, hearing the latest concerts, mingling with the latest people.

Remember the little things that give you that indefinable air of smartness—a fresh flower every day in your lapel, or an especially interesting piece of jewelry, stunning earrings, perfume that carries a lasting tantalizing fragrance.

By such economical measures on the part of all of us, we can within a short time populate our streets with living, moving shop window manikins, make our Capital the most modish city in the United States, keep up the morale of the Nation and start the Nazis and Japs toward internal collapse.

Peggy Koch Is Bride of Lieut. Mead

Dunkirk, N. Y., Oct. 4.—The marriage of Miss Peggy Koch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Koch of Dunkirk, to Lieut. James M. Mead, jr., son of United States Senator and Mrs. James M. Mead of Buffalo, took place this morning at 11 o'clock in St. Paul's Chapel of St. Mary's Church.

The ceremony was a simple one, attended only by members of the immediate families. The chapel was decorated with white and purple chrysanthemums. The Rev. Bertrand McCodwell, C.P., pastor of St. Mary's, performed the ceremony and the nuptial mass. Mrs. J. T. Madigan, organist, played the wedding march and background music during the ceremony.

Father Gives Bride Away

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of candlelight duchess satin, fashioned with a tight bodice with sweetheart neckline and long tight sleeves. The full skirt flowed into a long train. She wore her mother's wedding veil of illusion, and carried a cluster of gardenias.

Mrs. Felix S. Hourdequin of Yorktown, Va., was the matron of honor. She wore a floor length gown of purple velveteen, made with a tight bodice and long sleeves. Her Juliet cap was made of fresh lavender pompons, and she carried a bouquet of the same flowers.

Senator Mead was his son's best man.

Reception at Home Of Bride's Uncle

After the church ceremony a wedding breakfast for the two families was held at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Koch, on Washington ave.

The bride, whose father is postmaster of the city of Dunkirk and well known in busniess circles throughout the State, attended the Dunkirk schools, was graduated from Trinity College in Washington and received a master of science degree from the University of Chicago. She has been associated with the Food Distribution Administration in Washington, as a nutritionist in the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Lieutenant Mead attended schools in Buffalo and Washington and was attending the University of Maryland when he enlisted in the United States Army. He was commissioned at Aberdeen, Md., in the Ordnance Department of the U. S. Army, and is now an instructor at Aberdeen Proving Ground.

MRS. FREDERICK G. SMITHSON

whose marriage to Lieutenant Smithson, USAAF, took place Saturday in the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament at Chevy Chase Circle. Following a reception at the Mayflower, the couple left for a honeymoon in Savannah, Ga., after which they will make their home in Albany, Ga., where the bridegroom is stationed at Turner Field. The bride is the former Miss Naomi Peabody, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. Winthrop Peabody of Chevy Chase. Lieutenant Smithson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Smithson of Bethesda

Miss Eleanor Hall Becomes Bride of H. L. Allen

Now on a brief wedding trip are Mr. and Mrs. Horace Leonard Allen, who will make their home in Washington upon their return.

The bride is the former Miss Mary Eleanor Hall, daughter of Mrs. Robert Meredith Hall of Nashville, Tenn. Her marriage to Mr. Allen, consultant with the Office of Price Administration, took place here on Friday at St. John's Episcopal Church.

A graduate of Vanderbilt University, the bride has made her home here for the past two years. She is a member of the Washington Junior League and of the Nashville Girls' Cotillion Club. Mr. Allen, a Vanderbilt graduate, is a member of Phi Delta Theta.

Honduras Has New Secretary at Embassy Here

The flag of Honduras went up on the Pan American Union Building recently when Senor Gregorio Reyes Zelaya, First Secretary of the Embassy of Honduras, visited Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Union.

A relatively recent addition to the Capital's diplomatic colony, Senor Reyes Zelaya has been in Washington since early June when he came up to attend the Hot Springs food conference as Honduras' delegate. Although this is his first diplomatic post, the distinguished Honduran has had a brilliant career in the field of civil engineering and has occupied prominent positions in his country's government. Senor Reyes Zelaya, who, by the way, hails from Juticalpa, has been in turn head of the Technical Engineering Office of Honduras, Commissioner of Public Roads, Minister of the Interior and of Public Works and Administrator of the Customs of Puerto Cortes.

A graduate of Troy's Renssalear Polytechnic Institute and for many years a frequent visitor to this country, the newly arrived diplomat is thoroughly familiar with the United States and with Washington where he and his family have found a warm welcome. Besides his duties as Secretary of the Embassy, Senor Reyes Zelaya has been assigned those of being Honduras' representative at the interim committee of the United Nations food conference.

Junior League Luncheon Today

Representative J. William Fulbright, author of the House-approved resolution on postwar planning, will be the guest speaker at today's meeting of the Washington Junior League.

The combined luncheon and meeting will take place at the Sulgrave Club. Following Representative Fulbright's talk on "Foreign Policy," members of the league will discuss the number and variety of opportunities for volunteers open through the league placement office.

Leading the discussion will be Mrs. Robert Whitelaw Wilson, president of the league. Mrs. John Minor Wisdom is chairman of the luncheon committee.

Nancy Wilbur To Be Wed to Lieut. Lilly

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Wilbur of Winchester, Mass., and Woodstock, Vt., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Nancy Wilbur, to Lieut. (j. g.) Walter H. Lilly, 2d, U.S. N.R., son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Lilly of Washington.

Miss Wilbur was graduated from the Beaver Country Day School in Boston and Mount Vernon Junior College in Washington in 1942. She made her debut in the 1939-1940 season and is a member of the Junior League of Boston.

Lieutenant Lilly was graduated from Mercersburg Academy and from Yale University in 1938. He is on active duty in the Pacific area.

Stone—Cook

Mrs. Frederick Hosmer Cooke announces the engagement of her daughter, Olga, to Lieut. Howard Lyons Stone, jr., United States Navy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lyons Stone of Southport, Conn.

Miss Cooke is the daughter of the late Capt. Frederick Hosmer Cooke, C.E.C., United States Navy, and graduated from Holton Arms Junior College in 1942. She is the president of Tau Omicron Phi, the service sorority.

Lieutenant Stone attended Admiral Farragut Academy in Toms River, N. J., before entering the United States Naval Academy from which he was graduated with the Class of 1942.

The wedding will take place this fall.

Baldwin—Miller

Mrs. Ray W. Miller of Los Angeles announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Eloise Whitmer Miller to Joseph Silliman Baldwin, jr., son of Lieut. and Mrs. Joseph S. Baldwin, of Washington.

The bride-elect attended the University of Wyoming where she was a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority. Mr. Baldwin, now a first-class petty officer in the United States Coast Guard Reserve, attended Allegheny College and George Washington University. He is a member of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity. He recently returned from Sicily and is now on sea duty somewhere in the Pacific.

Troth Told

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan S. Silverberg of Washington, D. C., announce the engagement of their daughter, Edythe Lee Silverberg, to Aviation Cadet Kenneth Martin Herman, son of Mrs. Anna Favelson of this city. The wedding will take place in October.

Purely Personal

Mme. Wei, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, will entertain a few friends at tea on Friday afternoon at Twin Oaks.

Mrs. Richard Cooper will be guest of honor at a luncheon tomorrow when Miss Anita Cajigas entertains at the Shoreham.

Mr. and Mrs. Rifat Tirana entertain at a 4 to 7 o'clock "at home" on Sunday. A housewarming, the fete took place in their new home, 3500 35th st.

Comdr. and Mrs. Charles H. Ritt have as their houseguest, Mrs. Harold D. Shannon, wife of the late Col. Shannon. Mrs. Shannon came to the Capital from Quonset, R. I., where she visited her son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Robert H. Mershon. She will spend the winter in Washington.

Miss Jean McCarty is resuming her studies at Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., after spending the summer months with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. McCarty, at their home in Alexandria, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Michael Schammer will return today from the Panama Canal Zone, where they have resided at Cristobal for two years. Mr. Schammer expects to enter the armed forces upon their return and Mrs. Schammer will live with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Ruddy of this city.

Vice Marshal Walsh Honors The Nortons at Farewell Fete

Wing Commander Leaves Capital On Thursday

There were a lot of wings in evidence yesterday at the 6:30 to 8 o'clock party given by Air Vice Marshal George Victor Walsh in honor of Wing Comdr. and Mrs. John H. Norton.

The host, head of the Joint Staff Mission, had invited a number of his Canadian colleagues to drop in at his home on 49th st. to say goodby to the popular Nortons. Wing Commander Norton and his attractive wife came to the Capital in January of last year. He has been serving as director of Air Force Intelligence for the Canadian Joint Staff Mission. His next tour of duty will be at Dartmouth, Nova Scotia.

Many Uniforms In Evidence

A number of American and British uniforms appeared at yesterday's pleasantly informal party and even a few civilians, a few close friends of the honored guests, were in the gathering. Wing Commander and Mrs. Norton will be honored at several parties in the next few days.

One of the recent fetes that honored the departing Canadians was the Sunday evening meeting of the United Nations Club. Mrs. Norton has been serving on the board of the club for some time, and the fete, which took place in the Chauncey Depew house on Q st., put the Nortons in the spotlight. So much in the spotlight, in fact, that the honoree did an impromptu demonstration dance for the applauding guests.

Her Apartment Already Leased

Since her arrival here, Mrs. Norton has busied herself with a number of service activities. She has been a senior hostess at the Stage Door Canteen, has worked with the Home Hospitality committee, the Red Cross and the AWVS. With all of these interests, she and Wing Commander Norton have still found time to be frequent hosts at informal parties in their apartment on Sixteenth st.

About that apartment. Mrs. Norton has been besieged by calls from prospective renters since a story about their imminent departure appeared in the papers. She would like the world to know that it has been rented to someone on the apartment house's waiting list.

Wing Commander Norton will leave for his new post on Friday. Mrs. Norton does not yet know if she will be leaving with him. She may decide to stay on for a few weeks and join him later in Nova Scotia.

MRS. WILLIAM T. TIERNEY, who before her marriage to Captain Tierney yesterday, was Miss Mary Vivienne Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Adams.

Mrs. J. F. Thomas Plans Party

Mrs. John F. Thomas will entertain at a tea this afternoon at her home on Connecticut ave.

Assisting the hostess will be Mrs. Oscar Chapman, Mrs. Robert Leonard, Mrs. L. Welch Pogue, Mrs. Henry Deimel, Mrs. Herbert Budlong and Mrs. Clyde W. Fiddes.

Among the guests will be Mrs. Marston C. Sargent, Mrs. C. Theodore Larson, Mrs. E. V. Simreil, Mrs. Sidney Becker, Mrs. H. E. Horstmyer, Mrs. Helen Stoebe and Mrs. Edward Rosenbaum. The guests will include new members of the District League of Women Voters.

Chilean Envoy Entertains for Claude Bowers

At a dinner last evening at the Chilean Embassy, the Chilean envoy to this country, Ambassador Rodolfo Michels, and Senora de Michels entertained in honor of the U. S. Ambassador to Chile Claude Bowers.

Ranking guest at the event was the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Chile, Joaquin Fernandez Fernandez, and other guests included Ambassador Felix Nieto del Rio, Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally, Senator Joseph Guffey, and his sister, Miss Pauletta Guffey, former Ambassador Carlos Davila, Admiral W. O. Spears, Phillip Bonsal, Mr. and Mrs. Persifor Stilsbury, Mrs. Crystal Hyland Abelli, wife of the former Minister of Bolivia; Biddle Gattison, aide to Ambassador Bowers; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Mowrer, Commercial Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell, and the daughter of the Ambassador and Senora de Michels, Senorita Cristina Michels.

Local Couple To Wed Today

The marriage of two Washington residents will take place this afternoon in Des Moines, Iowa, when Miss Irma Mary Nisbet becomes the bride of Lieut. (j. g.) Glenn Curry Nixon.

Miss Nisbet is the daughter of Mrs. Anna M. Nisbet of Portland, Oreg., and Lieutenant Nixon is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Lewis Wesley Nixon of Des Moines, Iowa. The wedding will take place in the First Methodist Church at 4 o'clock, with Rev. Mr. Nixon, father of the bridegroom, officiating.

John E. Furland will give his niece in marriage. She will wear a gown of eggshell satin, fingertip length veil and carry a Bible and shower bouquet. Mrs. Eldon St. Clair will be the only attendant and Lester Madison Gates will serve as best man.

Following the ceremony a reception will take place for members of the wedding party. After a short wedding trip through New England, the couple will make their home in Arlington.

The bride is a graduate of Oregon State College and Columbia University. Lieutenant Nixon, a graduate of Simpson College, did graduate work at George Washington University and was a Nieman fellow at Harvard University.

About Washington . . .

BOWING OUT of Washington yesterday, the trio of Arabian notables who added their share of glitter to the Capital scene the past weekend took off to New York for a short visit. From there they will go to the South and West, returning this way around the end of October. Their schedule includes a second visit to Washington before they leave for England.

Egyptian Minister

For a long time to come, you're going to hear stories about those fabulous princes, who stopped over in Our Town for three days and make Washington officialdom so Saudi Arabia-conscious that local libraries never will be able to fill research requests about that land . . . where the Orient begins.

At the Legation of Iraq on Saturday and again at the Egyptian Legation on Sunday, I saw His Royal Highness Amir Faisal, Foreign Minister of Saudi Arabia and second son of the desert Napoleon, King Ibn Saud; and His Royal Highness Amir Khalid, another son, who bowed and smiled to countless Washingtonians and cameras. But from Arabia's Minister to London, Shikh Hafiz Wahbu, and a burnoose-bedecked secretary whose name I never could get straight, I learned most of what I know about the royal visitors—their past; and their future plans. They speak no English. "Not one word," said the secretary, shaking his head and spreading his palms fanwise in front of his chest. French? "Not one word," he repeated. "Only the native tongue," he added, proudly.

They love America. "It is so different from what we all expected," said the secretary. "So much more beautiful. So much more interesting."

Minister Shikh Hafiz Wahbu speaks English, of course. Beautiful English; and he acts as interpreter for Their Royal Highnesses. I asked him about the widely circulated reports that each of the princes had been married many times. Diplomatically, he declined to confirm any such rumors. "In our country, marriage is a different matter than in yours," he said; then quickly changed the subject.

"I am practicing the good neighbor policy," said the Egyptian Minister, Mahmoud Hassan, when I asked him for the story behind the story of his party for the royal Arabian visitors. "In this country, you talk much about your good neighbors, the South Americans. But your language and theirs is different. We speak the same tongue as the Saudi Arabians."

The tie between the two countries was very much in evidence at the Sunday reception. Attractive Mme. Hassan, one of the most popular hostesses in the Diplomatic Corps, chatted with the royal visitors between sieges of hand-shaking with other guests. Minister Hassan took time out of the receiving line for a talk with Minister Hafiz Wahbu; and together they surveyed the buffet, which boasted not only a tempting array of Oriental delicacies but also two huge cakes, iced in Egyptian national colors outlining the flags of Egypt and Saudi Arabia. Cameras clicked in a glare of Kleig lights at regular intervals as the party went merrily along . . . and into Capital history as one of the outstanding get-togethers of the early autumn season.

Much smaller, but also highly entertaining, was the reception on Friday afternoon where Their Royal Highnesses had their first glimpse of Washington officialdom by the dozens.

Mme. Hassan

"I got what I came for," said Representative Sol Bloom, proudly displaying his Short Snorter bill which Amir Feisal had just signed. About that time a whisper rippled through the ring of photographers who waited in the drawing room, a few feet away from the receiving line. In a second's time they were in action . . . pointing their cameras toward the gold-braided figure paying his respects. He was Admiral William D. Leahy. Many other notables followed him down that line; shook hands with the host and hostess and the royal Arabians; and lingered briefly for a second admiring glance at Mme. Jawdat, whose native crimson robe, with its intricate gold border and becoming sari, was the loveliest costume seen around these parts in many a day.

In the dining room, meanwhile, I was finding out something about the marital status of the Arabian Minister of Foreign Affairs, His Royal Highness Amir Feisal. My informant was an Arabian-born, American citizen. The eldest son of King Ibn Saud, he said, had a number of wives. How many? There was no telling, he went on. But his father had around 150 wives—never more than four at once, though—and 17, officially recognized sons!

If true . . . it certainly is.

WEEK-END VISITORS to Washington included Ira Victor Morris, son of the former U. S. Minister to Sweden and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris. A widely known author, the younger Mr. Morris is now working on a book about the problem of refugees in this country, and I understand he is planning to include some uncomplimentary references to a number of prominent persons now living in Washington . . . It has not yet been officially announced, but attractive Senora Carmen Vial de Senoret, widow of the former Chilean Ambassador to Great Britain, is slated for a change of diplomatic post. Attache of the Chilean Embassy here for some time, she has been chosen as the next Chilean consul at Boston.

Senora Vial de Senoret

Luncheon at Embassy Fetes Dr. Fernandez

Dr. Joaquin Fernandez Fernandez, visiting Minister of Foreign Affairs of Chile, was entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Argentine Embassy by the Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil.

The Chilean Ambassador, Rodolfo Michels, attended, with another Chilean Ambassador, Felix Nieto del Rio, who is a special assistant to Dr. Fernandez Fernandez and is traveling with him, with the rank of Ambassador. Other guests were the Peruvian Ambassador, Dr. Manuel de Freye y Santander; the Uruguayan Ambassador, Dr. Juan Carlos Blanco; the former United States Ambassador to Chile, Lieut. Col. William F. Culbertson; the former United States Ambassador to the Netherlands, George Gordon; the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Nelson Rockefeller; the president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Eric Johnston; Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Emilio G. Collado, George T. Summerlin, Mario Rodriguez, Brig. Gen. Antonio Parodi, Capt. Alberto Brunet, Nariano A. Barrenechea and Adolfo Scilingo.

Captain Cutler Returns Home

Capt. Merritt Cutler of the United States Army has joined Mrs. Cutler at their apartment on South Washington Street in Alexandria after spending several days in New York. He attended the reunion of the famous 107th Infantry in which he served during the first World War.

Now on duty in the Corps of Engineers, Captain Cutler has been stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., near Alexandria and was recently transferred for assignment to the Pentagon Building.

Capital Bridal Record Broken Here as Autumn Continues

Miss Alice Morgan Carson Becomes Bride Of Lieut. Comdr. Earle Francis Hiscock

The autumn wedding season, currently in full swing, has shattered all previous records this past week.

Among the out-of-town ceremonies of Saturday that are of interest here was the wedding in Greenwich, Conn., of Miss Alice Morgan Carson to Lieut. Comdr. Earle Francis Hiscock, USCGR. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Frank Martin Carson and the late Rev. Carson, and the bridegroom, stationed in Washington, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot A. Hiscock of Keene, N. H.

The ceremony took place in St. Bede's Chapel at Rosemary Hall, with the Rev. Harold Wilson officiating. Maj. Joseph Verner Reed gave the bride in marriage. She wore a crepe gown of French and carried a prayerbook. She was attended by Mrs. G. Holmes Perkins and J. Parker Bader served as best man. Ushering were Capt. Harold J. Coolidge and J. E. Nestell. A small reception followed at the home of the bride's mother.

The bride was graduated from Rosemary Hall, the University of Paris, Smith College and the Cambridge Graduate School of Architecture and Landscape Architecture. Commander Hiscock attended Harvard College and was graduated from M.I.T. He is now attached to the Office of the Coordinator of Research and Development, U. S. Navy in Washington.

Englund—Knox

Now on a southern wedding trip, are Lieut. (j.g.) Kenneth L. Englund and the former, Miss Marjorie L. Knox.

Their marriage took place Saturday at the Naval Academy Chapel in Annapolis, with Capt. William Thomas officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Ipha Knox. She was given in marriage by Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon and wore a costume of aquamarine with black accessories and a corsage of orchids. Mrs. George W. Elker was matron of honor and Capt. Thomas J. Flynn served as best man. Ushers were Lieut. William Feldman and Lieut. Edmund G. Tierney.

Following the ceremony, a reception took place at the home of Maj. and Mrs. C. J. Babcock in Washington. Both Lieut. Englund and his bride are graduates of the University of Washington.

Maholick—Clark

After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Thomas Maholick will make their home in Baltimore, where the bridegroom is a medical student at the University of Maryland.

The couple were married on Friday at the Sacred Heart Rectory. Officiating at the 6:30 ceremony was the Rev. Lawrence Wempe. The bride is the former Miss Ann Stanback Clark, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Alexander Bayard Clark of Newark, N. J. and Washington, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Peter Maholick of Lansford, Pa. and this city.

Colonel Clark gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a frock of Alice Blue and a corsage of white orchids. Mildred Maholick was maid of honor and Larry Knox was best man. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride attended Wilson Teacher's College and Mr. Maholick attended Franklin-Marshall College before entering the University of Maryland.

Our Former Right Arm Reports on Middle East

DICK COE

"After the Tunisian campaign and the Pantelleria business, I was assigned to writing. I wanted Stars and Stripes, but my PR colonel wanted me on his staff so would only loan me to S. and S. . . . A small group of us do most of the work in putting out this paper and it's been called one of the best of the Army papers . . . What with Karl Sprinkle, whom you recall from the Washington News; Gus Loeb, former New York Times man; Gene Lynch, of the Sacramento Union, and Capt. Robert Strother, of Time, we have a grand staff.

"Well, let's see. I saw the Jack Benny show out in the desert, where I'd been covering some air raids that turned out mighty successfully—Rome, Naples, Ploesti, Weiner Neustadt and all the rest of the Middle East summer blitz. With Benny were Larry Adler, Wini Shaw, Anna Lee and Jack Snyder, an accordionist who'd played for the Yacht Club Boys and was on his way home when he ran into Benny, who was looking for just such a handyman. So Benny has trouped pretty gallantly. The lads loved him because he was part of home to them—that voice brought back their Sunday evening dates and families around the home place of a winter's evening.

"Noel Coward has been around, as my enclosed clipping will show. I met him at a party given backstage one night for him and the Richard G. Caseys—he is now Minister of State in the Middle East and once was Australian Minister to Washington. Mr. Casey, that is. His wife is very charming and gives their open-air swimming pool over to American soldiers every Monday morning. I think you and I first met them at a screening of the Australian film, 'Forty Thousand Horsemen.' They send their best to their Washington friends.

"You'd have loved the show Beatrice Lillie did. I saw it in Tripoli, briefly, and in this Middle East city somewhat later. It was put on by ENSA, British equivalent of our USO, was called "Spring Party" and was filled with topflight stars—Lillie, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Henson, Richard Haydn, Dorothy Dickson and Mae Craven . . . You know I've always been timorous about meeting Lillie, for I've admired her so I simply feared she might not live up to my hopes. So I've always ignored any opportunities of this back home."

"So I gave my ENSA friend a couple of packs of Lucky Strikes for her, and bless the day if she didn't come tearing out to say thank you. She's as sweet and dear a person as I've ever met and so tiny—and very frail. Needless to say, she walked away with the show."

"Then there's been Will Fyfe, whose most amusing crack to a practically all-British house was, 'I've just been to America—ah, that'll be a grand place when they get finished wi' it!' This sums up so beautifully the average Britisher's view of American boastings that it brought down the house."

Miss Hayes Writes a Letter

"Also I've been blessed by a short note from Helen Hayes, who thanked me for congratulating her on 'Harriet,' which I did after reading your notice, for I couldn't help but recall the week she was here and you got the whole idea moving—remember? (Did you notice I said 'here,' just as if I were talking to you across the desk?) She was as sweetly thoughtful as ever and I bless her for taking the time to write me. I must try to summarize 'Middle East theaters notes' for her—but more briefly than this!"

"I also dropped Florence Reed a line to enclose a clipping, mentioning some of her Theater Wing work which wound up in one of the North African papers. She came back with a charmingly newsy letter and also the sad news she'd had a very bad illness in January. Yes, I must write her, too."

"Now don't say this isn't a letter. It'll be just my luck to have the boat sink!"

Fortunately the boat didn't. I hope the one in the opposite direction won't, either.

It is Bess Davis Schreiner, Washington manager for the Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription season, who reminds us that when the curtain rises on "Oklahoma," Monday night, October 18, at the National Theater, the occasion will mark the first offering of the twelfth subscription season in the Capital, notable for the largest subscription-membership in the history of the Theater Guild in Washington.

As of October 1, better than two full weeks prior to the opening, well over 9000 subscribers were enrolled, with interest steadily mounting. That is why all balcony seats for all evening performances are sold, except for a scattered single here and there.

There are, however, available seats in the balcony for practically all matinee performances for the Guild plays and the orchestra still offers excellent locations for all performances both afternoon and evening.

Thanks-for-the-Lift-on-a-Crowded-Day Note

Bet Dick Coe will be surprised to learn that he's still writing a column for The Post!

In One of the Plays in Army Show

SERGT. PHILLIP KAPLAN, PFC. EUGENE SCHOEING
two of the principals in "Where E're We Go," by Pvt. First Class John B. O'Dea, which opens the series of five one-act plays, comprising "The Army Play by Play." This all-soldier show last night opened a week's engagement in the National Theater for the benefit of Army Emergency Relief.

"The Army Play by Play" Is A Terrific Hit at the National

By Nelson B. Bell

"THE ARMY PLAY BY PLAY," Uncle Sam presents John Golden's all-soldier show, comprised of "WHERE E'ER WE GO," by Pfc. John B. O'Dea, Fort Lewis, Washington; "FIRST COUSINS," by Corpl. Kurt S. Kasznar, Second Service Command, New York; "BUTTON YOUR LIP," by Corpl. Irving Gaynor Neiman, Chanute Field, Ill.; "MAIL CALL," by Lieut. Ralph Nelson (formerly air cadet), Souther Field, Americus, Ga., and "PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES," by Pfc. Alfred D. Geto, Second Service Command, New York. Written, directed and acted by enlisted Army personnel. Presented for Army Emergency Relief, at the National Theater.

The Army has done it again!

"The Army Play by Play," which last night opened its week's engagement in the National Theater for Army Emergency Relief, in its proper classification, is as terrific a hit as "This Is the Army" was as a mammoth musical spectacle.

The five one-act plays grouped under the attraction's blanket title are individually and collectively spirited and enlivening entertainment of the first grade. Their titles and authorship will be found in the small-type paragraph preceding these hurried midnight remarks.

Completely Army Job

Written, directed and acted by the enlisted personnel of the Army, they strike a high level of excellence that would put to shame many of the vaunted productions of the commercial theater. The accent in them all is placed on comedy, only two deviating from the pursuit of hilarity sufficiently to balance the bill with a brief excursion into melodrama aboard a Nazi U-boat in the heart of a United Nations convoy and a fleeting touch of pathos. The rest are strictly for fun.

"Where E'er We Go," with which the five-ply program opens, has about it the flavor and humor of the barracks room scene in Maxwell Anderson's "The Eve of St. Mark," without in any way infringing upon that fine play's content or purpose. It is a keen examination of the humor that can arise from an Army's bewilderment when none of its recruits have any idea what is going to happen to them next. Directed by Corpl. Paul Tripp, it is enacted by a splendid cast of 12, in which Pvt. Louis Menchel, Corpl. Paul Tripp, Sgt. Phillip Kaplan, Pfc. Eugene Schoenig and Pfc. Larry McGrath perform with conspicuous merit.

Author Stars in Own Piece

With its author, Corpl. Kurt S. Kasznar, and director, Sergt. Barry Thomson, veteran actor well-known to Washington audiences, cast in the pivotal roles, "First Cousins" is the melodramatic number among the five—a tense study of a German-American soldier and his Nazi cousin in a critical situation on the high seas.

"Button Your Lip," directed by Sergt. Arthur O'Connell, touches off the evening's greatest explosion of laughter, with Representative Clare Boothe Luce appearing in the symposium's only feminine role to the great decorative advantage of a playlet that pokes a barrel of fun at the high command. Corpl. Phillip Pine, Sergt. Arthur O'Connell and Pvt. Seymour L. Harrison are helpful members of the longest cast on the bill, with Corpl. Irving J. Engleman stealing the comedy honors, first as "goat" and then as hero of all the convulsingly funny things that happen.

A Bit of Gentleness

The one tenderly serious note is struck in "Mail Call," directed by Pvt. Ross Hertz, a warmly sympathetic study of his pals' reactions to the death of a soldier, whose conduct under fire might not have been all that it should have been. The most effective performances here, it seemed to me, were those of Pvt. Charles Zimmerman and Pvt. Edward Kramer, although in appraising the merit of any skit it seems an injustice not to mention every member of its cast.

"Pack Up Your Troubles" directed by Corpl. Alan Wilson, is pure farce that goes in for humor a little more extravagant, but no less enjoyable, than the others. Doubling in this, Corpl. Kurt Kasznar, Corpl. Phillip Pine and Pvt. Richard Kaplan, set the pace for the others.

Represented in the acting personnel are Camp Wood, the Army's Special Service Branch, in New York, Fort Monmouth, Fort Hancock and Camp Upton. Any one of them could take over a Broadway theater to the advantage of "show business" after the war. It is all the more to their credit that they obtain such stupendous results with the sketchiest of "impressionistic" stage settings.

Specialties Rank High

Following the first, second and fourth of the abbreviated dramas, top-hole specialties are introduced. In the order named, they are presented by Pvt. Jules Munshin, who, is almost, if not quite, a Reginald Gardiner; Pvt. Erasmus Di Russo and Pvt. Vito Coppola, topflight tap dancers, and Pvts. Adolph and Henning Arnaut, those acrobatic violinists and "two loving birds," long familiar to local stages, all from Camp Upton.

Pfc. Keith Davis is an after-intermission tenor of more than ordinary competence and a word should be said for the splendid pit soldier-orchestra, under the dynamic conductorship of Sergt. Harry Goodman.

Following last night's final curtain, Producer John Golden, originator of the idea for "The Army Play by Play," was called up from the audience to the stage by the cast. After expressing his pride in the performance, he, in turn, introduced Vice President Wallace and General Phillipson, in charge of Army Emergency Relief, who voiced similar enthusiasm—all of which was topped by the audience.

Once word gets around what a whale of a show this is, the National won't be a tenth large enough to hold all those who will want to see it.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Broadside

New York Oct. 4.

Jack Benny and Larry Adler were in the Stork Club, telling of their experiences in tour which took them to Persia and Italy . . . Benny spent an afternoon with General Patton in Sicily. For 20 minutes, "Blood and Guts" Patton spoke of the enemy, using the frankest, toughest epithets ever uttered on a battlefield. Patton then mentioned an American sergeant who had been killed—and the general wept . . . Two letters, sent by Benny to his wife, Mary Livingstone, were censored. Across the first letter the censor wrote: "Dear Mary, I'm sorry I had to cut this out. But save the letter and when Jack gets home, he'll tell you all about it—The Censor." . . . The second letter bore the memo: "Dear Mary, Jack shouldn't say these things. But I'm saving the parts I cut, and will send them to you after the war—The Censor."

NOEL COWARD

In Cairo, Adler learned that Noel Coward was in the vicinity, and sent a message asking him to join in the afternoon show. Coward appeared, and sang his now-famous "Don't Let's Be Beastly to the Germans" . . . Adler asked him to sing his oldtime favorite, "Mad Dogs and Englishmen" . . . "I've resolved not to sing that song," said Coward, "because all the places mentioned in it—Singapore, Rangoon, Burma, etc.—were lost by us. But we'll get them back, and when we do, I'll sing 'Mad Dogs and Englishmen' again. But not until then."

In New York City's war bond parade last week, one of the unnoticed marchers was a tall, moustached man who carried a large bond poster from 14th st. to 57th. He had earned his place in the parade by selling $348,000 worth of war bonds . . . Only one person recognized him—his wife, who was standing at an appointed place on a street corner . . . The sign-carrying marcher was the Archduke Franz Josef of Austria.

When Robert Murphy returns from North Africa to Washington, the State Department will reward him with a post in South America . . . Wendell Willkie's current visit to Hollywood concerns, among other things, the movie adaptation of his "One World" . . . Abe Frosch, the witness whose whistle-blowing touched off the Amen investigation of the Brooklyn policy ring, which involved the police force, will be brought to trial on October 18 before a blue ribbon jury . . . Florence Halop, sister of the "Dead End" boy, Billy Halop, will play the Miss Duffy role in "Duffy's Tavern" . . . Governor Lehman will retain 30 of his employes in his new job.

Mike Romanoff visited Cafe Society Uptown and asked to see Jimmy Savo. He was told that Savo was in his dressing room. "No, don't send for him," said Mike, unregally. "I shall go to him." He went upstairs to Savo's dressing room and gave Jimmy a $50 bill. "Once, many years ago, you were good enough to replenish my exchequer," Mike reminded him. "I am repaying my debt" . . . Savo was startled, at first, by this novel scene—a now affluent Mike Romanoff repaying old debts. Then he recovered and said: "But Mike, I loaned you $20, not $50" . . . "Sir," Romanoff insisted, "No one lent a Romanoff less than $50."

The venerable Fanny Ward arrived at El Morocco the other night, escorted by three young men. "Tonight, at last, I'm out with men my own age," said Fanny. "I'm 75, they're 25 each" . . . When W. Averell Harriman goes to Russia, half his baggage will consist of underwear, socks, handkerchiefs, shirts, etc., for 11 British and American correspondents in Moscow. The expense was shared by Quentin Reynolds, who was in Moscow recently and who knows the newspapermen's needs . . . Harriman, incidentally, will go to London before reporting to Moscow . . . Louis Johnson, the former Assistant Secretary of War, will have a new State Department job soon.

Lieut. Col. Charles Poletti, the former Governor of New York who now is the military governor of Palermo, was confronted by the black market problem as soon as he took command. Colonel Poletti made two effective decisions immediately. He ruined the black market in wine by releasing the large stores of wine which the Germans had garnered for themselves and then had to abandon. And he curbed the black market in other products by a fine-and-prison sentence to the wealthiest and most important profiteer, as a reminder that bribery, a common practice under Nazi rule, is out.

Sergt. Jerry Lewis, the magazine writer now in the Air Force, spent more than six months at Fort Knox in the tank forces. A bandleader asked him: "What's it like, working in a tank?" Sergeant Lewis explained: "It's like Gene Krupa in a telephone booth" . . . Emil Ludwig was discussing some of the great men he has interviewed. "I missed one great story," Ludwig sighed. "I once heard George Bernard Shaw begin: 'When I met Marx and Engels—then a lady interrupted and Shaw never finished the story" . . . An interviewer asked Billy Rose about his activities for the past two years. "I've been coasting," said Rose, "because the big show is on the front pages." Clifford Odets protested: "But Billy, during that period you produced my 'Clash by Night.' Fifty years from now you'll be glad you produced such a great play."

Bendix Picks 10 Homeliest Actors

William Bendix, who frankly confesses that he's no beauty, sat down and after a great deal of pondering, submitted a list of 10 actors whom he considers the homeliest guys in Hollywood. And while he was at it, Bill decided that his own name, like Abou ben Adhem's, might as well lead all the rest, because after the fans see him as Janoshik, the men's washroom attendant in Paramount's "Hostages," he'll certainly never have a chance to play a romantic lead.

HEDDA HOPPER

Longs for 'Tomorrow'!

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 4.—Ida Lupino wants to do the story, "This Is Tomorrow," about the life of the English violinist, Grisha Goludoff, written by Flight Lieut. Eddie Anderson. . . . Most sought after writer in town Gary Moore, who M. C.'s the Jimmy Durante broadcast and writes most of it. . . . Frank Scully and Jack Morris finished a new play titled "What Made Alexander Great?" They'd like Maurice Evans as Alexander, but he's busy entertaining soldiers in Honolulu. . . . . Leslie Charteris, of The Saint series, marries Elizabeth Bryan Borst, radio singer, at Santa Fe in October, then returns to finish his mystery yarn, "Lady On a Train," for Deanna Durbin. . . . Marc Connolly's dividing his time between the writers' congress and a tall story for Betty Hutton called "Divided by Five." Betty could be divided by five and still make good. Gals at her studio need not be afraid of Betty any longer, 'cause from now on she'll be starred in her own right.

IDA LUPINO

No Dice

Jinx Falkenburg, wanting to play an unglamorous role to prove that she could, dressed herself up in pigtails, dirty sweater, men's pants. She walked into Harry Cohn's office carrying Sidney Skolsky under her arm. Harry says, "On you he looks good—but you still don't get the part." . . . Laraine Day is back from a personal appearance at the Kaiser shipyards where Paulette Goddard auctioned off an orchid for a million dollar war bond to Felix Kahn. I'll be disappointed if Paulette didn't get him to sign the bond over to her. . . . Wait till you get a load of Barbara Stanwyck in a blonde wig in "Double Indemnity." Says she even feels sexy in it. "Why didn't I wear one before?" She did in "Stella Dallas," but that was a mother role.

For Pete's Sake

Pete Smith's latest short, "Scrap Happy," is by way of being a knockout. But then Pete's always are. Remember last year—"Seventh Column" and "Falla," FDR's dog? . . . Corinne Griffith (Mrs. George Marshall) stopped off here for a few days after spending the summer at Rancho Del Mar with her two daughters. She's one of Washington's pet hostesses—wife of the laundry king, not the general. . . . Eddie Buzzell is wearing a brace on his foot. On the Hollywood cavalcade bond tour Eddie decided to do a little hoofing with Fred Astaire. He's been a director for so long his steps got rusty, so did the joints. Result was an injury to his foot. . . . Herbert Marshall, so cooperative, he's always willing to pinchhit for a fellow actor if he doesn't think he'll be able to make his radio show. . . . Edgar Buchanan, dentist, who turned actor—and good, too—had his option renewed at Columbia. . . . Rosalind Russell stands treat for the gang on "Ten Per Cent Woman" daily, so the crew nicknamed the coke stand "Roz Russell's Stage Hands' Canteen."

Agnes Moorehead's been discovered by our studios as a great actress. We knew it when she did "Magnificent Ambersons."

Just Lounging Around

now a star on the M.-G.-M. lot, does her lounging in luxury. The tunic that goes with this harem-trousered pajama suit is all-over braid, a-sparkle with multicolored sequins. And how did this ever manage to get off the fashion page!

John L. Lewis 'Gas' Ration Case Closed

Satisfied with a categorical reply from John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers' chieftain, that his motor trip to Illinois last August was for business reasons, the Alexandria War Price and Ration Board and the OPA board at Richmond yesterday marked the investigation as closed.

In correspondence with J. S. Douglas, chief clerk of the Alexandria board, Lewis' home board, the labor leader declared that the trip was made for business reasons and that "engagements en route were synchronized to conform to time limitations affecting absence from wage negotiations in Washington. Railroad reservations to conform to each schedule were not available."

Lewis wrote the "trip covered the period of August 9 to 15. Points visited included the Preston County coal field of West Virginia, the Hocking Valley field of Ohio, Indianapolis, Ind.; Springfield, Ill., and Cincinnati."

Regarding the visit to his mother in Springfield, Ill., during the trip, Lewis made the following reply repeating Douglas' questions:

"A. Question: Would the trip have been made regardless of where your mother happened to reside?

"Answer: Yes.

"B. Question: In case the visit was made, was it merely incidental to the trip?

"Answer: Yes.

"Question: Between which two business stops was it made?

"Answer: Following Indianapolis engagement and prior to Cincinnati engagement.

"D. Question: Did such visit require mileage additional to the business calls; if so, what distance and what class of gasoline coupons were used?

"Answer: Distance from United Mine Workers Building, Springfield, Ill., to my mother's home, 1100 block West Lawrence ave., approximately 15 city blocks. All gasoline purchased on trip through use of C coupons. Approximately 5 gallons A coupon gasoline in tank at beginning of trip. During two days in Springfield car was not used in connection with business or other calls about city.

"Explanatory note: Visit to Indianapolis was made in connection with voluntary liquidation affairs of United Labor Bank & Trust Co., of which the undersigned was president. Visit to Springfield was necessary in connection with financial and legal affairs of United Mine Workers of America, which maintains branch offices in that city. Visit to Cincinnati was made in connection with wage negotiations United Mine Workers of America and organizational affairs of its subordinate units in Cincinnati area."

Douglas made the following comment on the case:

"This office has always believed that Mr. Lewis would give a thoroughly satisfactory explanation of his trip if called upon. This he has done.

"The explanation was requested merely to satisfy the press and the public."

Grows a Whopper

Spring Grove, Va. (AP).—Dewitte Hughes may not grow the best cantaloupes, but he found one in his patch that he thinks may be one of the largest ever grown. The melon weighed 18 pounds and was eaten by eight persons.

Relief At Last For Your Cough

Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm, and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

CREOMULSION
for Coughs, Chest Colds, Bronchitis

Asthma Mucus Loosened While You Sleep
Say Thousands of Sufferers

Choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma ruin your sleep and rob your blood of vitally important oxygen because you can't get air in and out of your lungs properly. But now it is no longer necessary to suffer from these terrible attacks without the benefit you may receive from a physician's prescription called Mendaco. Within a very short time after the first dose, Mendaco ingredients start circulating thru the blood, thus reaching the smallest as well as the largest Bronchial tubes where they usually quickly help liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. In fact, Mendaco has proved so successful in helping thousands of sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma that it is sold under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. So get Mendaco from your druggist today for only 60c.

Post Expose Of Brewster Facts Praised

Representative Hoffman (Republican) of Michigan yesterday told House members that the Washington Post rendered "a patriotic service," in printing an account by Agnes E. Meyer last Sunday of the reasons for productior failure of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp.

During a 10-minute speech on the floor Hoffman inserted Mrs. Meyer's full page article in the Congressional Record.

Hoffman told his colleagues that he had given the facts to the House Naval Affairs Committee last February. He asserted the facts concerning the labor difficulties in the Brewster plant were found to be as he presented them, but added, "They did nothing about it."

"A Patriotic Service"

"In printing this story," Hoffman said, "The Post is rendering a patriotic service. My only regret is that it did not print the truth about the situation back in he early days of 1943—yes,-and prior to that date."

Hoffman charged that the Administration has been responsible for the management of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., and that since the Administration had never supported the management during a controversy with labor it has been responsible for the corporation's failures.

Hoffman quoted Mrs. Meyer's report of the statement by Tom De Lorenzo, UAW leader, that the union's policy was not to win the war at any cost, but to win it maintaining labor gains.

Cites Work Stoppages

He cited numerous instances of work stoppage, including the strike of union members who also were members of the Coast Guard Reserve, and asked:

"Where is Prosecutor Maloney and his Grand Jury?"

Hoffman concluded his address as follows:

"Because the article in The Post comes from a source which can under no circumstances be charged with being either anti-Administration or antilabor, because it is so factual, so revealing and because it so clearly, in spite of the writer's apparent admiration for Mr. De Lorenzo, sets forth the vicicus, unpatriotic and un-American tactics of Mr. Tom De Lorenzo, and leaders who share his views, it is printed as a part hereof."

Capt. Clark Gable Wins Air Medal

London, Oct. 4 (AP).—Capt. Clark Gable has been awarded the Air Medal for "exceptionally meritorious achievement while participating in five separate bomber combat missions," Airforce Headquarters announced today.

The former movie star's latest raid was against Nantes, France, on September 23, on which he manned a Flying Fortress nose gun and took motion pictures for training purposes.

WLB Head Maps Program for Brewster Plants

William H. Davis, chairman of the War Labor Board, yesterday outlined a program to make sure that labor and management at plants of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. correct a condition which has made the production record one of the most notorious of this war.

In a formal opinion upholding the Navy's right to shift plant guards sworn into the Coast Guard, irrespective of union seniority rights, Davis warned the union—the CIO United Automobile Workers—that its record will be reviewed in six months to see if it is entitled to retain the security of the union shop provision contained in the old agreement between the parties.

Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer of The Post spent a week investigating production conditions in the company plants and revealed details of a virtually complete breakdown of normal management controls, accompanied by an expansion of union power to the detriment of production in a story published in Sunday's Post.

Davis laid down three general yardsticks for measuring labor and management accomplishment at Brewster which seemed directed at conditions disclosed in Mrs. Meyer's article.

Davis said the board would be interested in reviewing the following factors at the end of the six months' probationary period which he also made applicable to management to a certain extent:

"(1) Proof by its conduct that the union subscribes to the spirit as well as to the letter of the no-strike-no-lockout agreement, and that for the duration of the war it recognizes and accepts the rule that reduction or stoppage of production is not to be used to enforce employe demands during the negotiation of a collective bargaining agreement or during operations under a completed agreement.

"(2) Proof likewise that the union has not used the disciplinary machinery of its organization to hinder or prevent members of the company's supervisory force from properly discharging their duties.

"(3) Production. This is a joint responsibility which the company and the union must share together. It takes two to make a quarrel, and the company's record in this case, by its own admission, leaves much to be desired. Only intelligent and alert supervision begets willing and effective work down the line. If company and union alike are doing their jobs, man-hours per unit of production will fall perceptibly. The board will watch closely these figures."

An unusual feature of the WLB order in the Brewster case provides for the designation by the War Labor Board of an agent of the board empowered to make on-the-spot decisions whenever disputes involving one of the company plants arise.

The order directed management and labor to execute a new collective bargaining agreement replacing one which expired some months ago, with the assistance of the board's agent.

"In short," Davis said, "the board believes that the stabilizing effect of a new collective bargaining agreement will contribute substantially to vital war production at the company's plants. It has accordingly taken extraordinary steps to expedite execution of such an agreement."

Brakewoman Sues Rail for $100,000 For Loss of Leg

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Mrs. Mildred B. Young, 25-year-old brakewoman, mother of two children, of Baltimore, Md., who Saturday filed a $100,000 damage suit against the Pennsylvania Railroad for the loss of a leg, is the first woman to sue under the Federal Employers Liability Act, her attorney said here today.

In the action filed in Federal Court at Brooklyn, the brakewoman said she was cleaning out a roadbed in the Calvert freight yards at Baltimore when a backing freight car struck her and injured her right leg, necessitating amputation.
